A PROJECT REPORT
ON

AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education

Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements of the degree of

"Bachelor of Engineering"

In

Information Technology

by

Mayank Thakur: 60
Aryan Vaity: 62
Shubham Vichare: 63
Suyash Vichare: 64

Name of Supervisor(s):

Asst. Prof Aarti Abhyankar

Department Of Information Technology

K.C. COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING & MANAGEMENT STUDIES & RESEARCH, THANE (E)

University of Mumbai

(2024-25)

CERTIFICATE

This is to certify that the project entitled AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education is a bonafide work of "Mayank Thakur (60)", "Aryan Vaity (62)", "Shubham Vichare (63)", "Suyash Vichare (64)" submitted to the University of Mumbai in partial fulfillment of the requirement for the award of the degree of "Bachelor of Engineering" in "Information Technology".

Asst. Prof Aarti Abhyankar
Supervisor/Guide

Prof Amarja Adgaonkar
Head of Department

Dr. Vilas Nitnaware
Principal

Project Report Approval for B.E.

This project report entitled AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education by Mayank Thakur (60), Aryan Vaity (62), Shubham Vichare (63), Suyash Vichare (64) is approved for the degree of Bachelor of Engineering in Information Technology.

Examiners

1._____

2._____

Date:

Place: Thane

Declaration

We declare that this written submission represents our ideas in our own words and where others' ideas or words have been included, we have adequately cited and referenced the original sources. We also declare that we have adhered to all principles of academic honesty and integrity and have not misrepresented or fabricated or falsified any idea/data/fact/source in my submission. We understand that any violation of the above will be cause for disciplinary action by the Institute and can also evoke penal action from the sources which have thus not been properly cited or from whom proper permission has not been taken when needed.

Name of Student	Roll No	Signature
Mayank Thakur	60
Aryan Vaity	62
Shubham Vichare	63
Suyash Vichare	64

Date:

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

We would like to express special thanks of gratitude to our Guide & Project Coordinator Asst. Prof. Aarti Abhyankar who gave us the golden opportunity to do this wonderful project on the topic of AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education, which also helped us in doing a lot of research and we came to know about so many new things. We are very grateful to our Head of the Department Asst. Prof. Amarja Adgaonkar for extending her help directly and indirectly through various channels in our project work. We would also like to thank Principal Dr. Vilas N Nitnaware for providing us the opportunity to implement our project. We are really thankful to them. Finally, we would also like to thank our parents and friends who helped us a lot in finalizing this project within the limited time frame.

Name of student and Roll No.

Sr. No	Name	Roll No.
1.	Mayank Thakur	60
2.	Aryan Vaity	62
3.	Shubham Vichare	63
4.	Suyash Vichare	64

TABLE OF CONTENT

Sr.No.	Topic	Page No.
	Certificate …..…….…….	i
	Approval Sheet ……	ii
	Declaration ……...	iii
	Acknowledgement ……	iv
	List of Figures …….	vi
	List of Tables …….....	vii
	Abstract ...…….....	viii
1. Introduction ……..……		1
2. Review of Literature …...……		2
3. Proposed Work …….		11
3.1 Requirement Analysis…….….		11
3.1.1 Scope
3.1.2 Feasibility Study
3.1.3 Hardware & Software Requirement
3.2 Problem Statement ……...		17
3.3 Project Design……...		18
3.4 Methodology …….....		24
3.4.1 Green IT Practices Implemented
3.5 Implementation …….		27
4. Test Cases ……		30
5. Results and Discussions …….		36
5.1 Code ……		36
5.2 Output…….		37
5.3 Result Analysis ……...		38
6. Conclusion ……...		40
7. Future Scope ……...		41
8. References……		42
9. Publications by the candidate…….		43
10. External and Internal Project Competition Certificates……		49

List of Figures

Fig. No.	Name of figure	Page No.
3.3.2.1	System Architecture	19
3.3.3.2	UML Component Diagram	20
3.3.2.3	UML Use Case Diagram	21
3.3.2.4	UML Sequence Diagram	22
3.3.2.5	Level 0 DFD	23
3.3.2.6	Level 1 DFD	23
3.5	Gantt Chart	27
5.1	Frontend Code	36
5.2	Frontend Module of Code	36
5.3	Backend Code	37
5.4	Application Dashboard	37
5.5	Selection of Parts	38
5.6	Information of the Parts	39

List of Tables

Sr. No.	Name of Table	Page No.
2.1	Literature Survey	08
3.1.3.1	Hardware and Software Requirements	15
4.1.1	Response Time for Services	31
4.1.2	Throughput	32
4.2.1	Sustainability Software Metrics	33
4.3.1	Use Cases	34

ABSTRACT

The application of Augmented Reality (AR) in education is revolutionizing the way students engage with complex subjects, particularly in the fields of science and medicine. This paper explores the development and implementation of an AR-based educational tool focused on the visualization and understanding of human internal organs. The traditional methods of learning anatomy—such as textbooks, 2D diagrams, or even cadaver dissections—are often static, expensive, and limited in their capacity to offer interactive learning experiences. AR, however, provides an innovative solution that bridges these gaps by combining real-world environments with virtual 3D models, delivering an immersive learning experience that enhances comprehension and retention. The proposed system allows users to visualize full-scale, three-dimensional models of human internal organs, projected into their surrounding physical environment using AR-enabled devices like smartphones, tablets, or AR headsets. These models are interactive, allowing students to zoom in, rotate, and explore each organ from multiple angles. Users can also dissect layers of the virtual organs to study internal structures in more detail. Such interactivity fosters spatial understanding, which is essential in fields like medicine, where students must not only memorize the appearance of organs but also their positions and relationships within the human body.

1. INTRODUCTION

Augmented Reality (AR) technology is revolutionizing the way students learn about human anatomy by providing an immersive and interactive approach to studying internal organs. AR allows learners to visualize complex structures in three dimensions, offering a more dynamic and engaging experience compared to traditional textbooks or static models. Through AR-based applications, students can explore organs like the heart, lungs, liver, and brain in real-time, manipulating and observing them from various angles. This interactive approach enables a deeper understanding of how these organs function and relate to one another within the human body. By overlaying virtual organs onto real-world environments, AR enhances comprehension and retention, making abstract concepts more tangible and easier to grasp. Moreover, AR-based tools offer the ability to explore organs layer by layer, giving users the ability to study each system in detail, such as the cardiovascular or nervous system, while offering a safer and more accessible alternative to cadaver dissection.

As AR continues to advance, its integration into educational settings is becoming increasingly important, especially in fields like medicine and biology, where understanding human anatomy is crucial. One of the most significant advantages of AR-based anatomy education is its accessibility. While cadaver dissections have long been the gold standard for medical education, they are costly, time-consuming, and not always available to students at earlier stages of study. AR bridges this gap by offering a hands-on experience without the need for physical specimens, making it a cost-effective and scalable solution. Moreover, AR enhances the learning environment by offering repeatable, error-free models of organs that can be dissected and reassembled countless times, providing a level of precision and repeatability unmatched by traditional methods.[4]

2. REVIEW OF LITERATURES

Sr. No	Title of Paper	Methodology	Advantages	Challenges
1.	"AR-based Learning: Visualizing Human Organs in Medical Education", 2019.	Unity 3D, Vuforia, Android-based AR	AR improves visualization. Understanding of complex anatomical structures	Limited accessibility to high-end AR devices
2.	"Augmented Reality for Medical Training: Human Internal Organs Visualization", 2020.	ARCore, Unity Engine, Mobile AR Toolkit	AR helps in hands-on, immersive learning. Especially in medical education	High development cost of AR applications
3.	"Immersive AR Models for Teaching Human Anatomy", 2021.	Microsoft HoloLens, Unity 3D, MRTK (Mixed Reality Toolkit)	Immersive AR models significantly enhance spatial understanding of organs	Requires stable AR infrastructure for effective use
4.	"Augmented Reality Systems for Human Anatomy Learning", 2020.	ARKit (iOS), WebAR, Unreal Engine	AR systems provide better engagement compared to traditional methods	Lack of widespread implementation in regular curricula
5.	"AR Applications for Visualizing Internal Human Organs in Medical Education", 2021.	Vuforia, ARCore, Unity 3D, 3D Organ Models	AR applications improve practical knowledge retention of internal organs	Requires technical expertise for smooth implementation
6.	"Use of Augmented Reality in Medical Education: A Study on Internal Organs", 2020.	WebAR, Unity Engine, Blender for 3D modeling	AR aids in improving comprehension. Improves memory retention of anatomy	Limited content scope within AR models
7.	"AR in Medical Schools: Learning Human Internal Organs", 2019.	ARKit, Unity 3D, Mobile/tablet AR	Significant improvement in anatomy learning outcomes through AR	High dependency on hardware and software compatibility
8..	"Interactive Learning of Human Anatomy Using AR", 2020	AR.js, Unity 3D, A-Frame for WebAR	AR fosters interactive learning, promoting engagement and deeper understanding	Steep learning curve for first-time users of AR technologies

9.	"Enhancing Anatomy Education through AR-based Organ Visualization", 2021.	ARCore, AI-assisted AR rendering, 3D CAD modeling	AR enables detailed 3D visualization of internal organs, aiding in deeper understanding	Limited real-world testing across diverse student populations
10.	"AR-enhanced Medical Learning: Focusing on Human Internal Organs", 2020	Unity 3D, ARKit, Microsoft HoloLens	Improved anatomy learning with AR, for internal organs.	Relies on expensive and sophisticated.
11	Augmented Reality in Medical Education: A Systematic Review Journal of Medical Education, 2023.	Unity 3D, ARKit, Microsoft HoloLens	A systematic review of AR's impact on medical training. AR-based applications significantly improve student engagement and knowledge retention by providing a 3D, interactive learning environment. Technologies Used: Unity 3D, ARKit, Microsoft HoloLens	High implementation costs, requires technical expertise, and lacks standardized content.
12	AR-Based Human Anatomy Learning: A Comparative Study: IEEE Xplore,2022.	Vuforia, Unreal Engine, ARCore	Compared AR-based learning with traditional 2D methods. Students using AR showed better spatial understanding of human organs and improved test scores. Technologies Used: Vuforia, Unreal Engine, ARCore	Hardware dependency—smooth rendering requires high-performance devices such as AR headsets or tablets.
13	Immersive AR for Interactive Organ Visualization: Springer,2023.	Microsoft HoloLens, ARToolKit, AI-driven AR rendering	Demonstrates how real-time interaction with 3D organ models enhances medical education. The study proves that tactile engagement with virtual organs helps reinforce learning. Technologies Used: Microsoft HoloLens, ARToolKit, AI-driven AR rendering	AR systems lack a comprehensive content library, making it difficult to cover all aspects of human anatomy.

14	Effectiveness of AR in Teaching Human Anatomy: Elsevier,2021	Mixed Reality, Leap Motion, Oculus AR SDK	AR tools reduce cognitive load and increase knowledge retention by presenting human organs in layered, interactive visuals. Technologies Used: Mixed Reality (MR), Leap Motion, Oculus AR SDK	Some users experience discomfort and eye strain when using AR for extended periods.
15	Developing an AR-Based Organ Simulation for Education: ACM Digital Library,2022	WebAR, OpenGL ES, 3D Organ Rendering	AR provides an intuitive interface for students to manipulate 3D organ models, allowing rotation, zooming, and layering of tissues. Technologies Used: 3D Organ Rendering with WebAR, OpenGL ES	Requires continuous updates to ensure medical accuracy, as anatomical research evolves.
16	Role of AR in Surgical Training and Medical Education: Medical Education Journal,2020	Haptic Feedback, AI-powered AR overlays	AR enhances practical skills by simulating real-life surgeries with high precision. Allows students to practice incisions and organ handling. Technologies Used: Haptic feedback integration, AI-powered AR overlays	High dependency on hardware compatibility, as AR performance varies across devices.
17	AR vs. Traditional Methods in Anatomy Education: ScienceDirect,2022	Neural rendering	Study reveals that AR-based education improves test scores compared to cadaver-based learning. AR enables a cleaner, reusable, and more ethical learning method. Technologies Used: AI-assisted AR, Neural rendering for real-time interaction	Standardization issues—not all medical institutions adopt AR-based education due to lack of regulatory guidelines.

18	AR-Based Learning for High School Biology Students: Educational Technology & Society,2023.	Mobile AR, WebXR, Unity Engine	AR technology helps increase interest and motivation among high school students studying human biology Makes abstract organ functions more understandable. Technologies Used: Mobile-based AR with WebXR, Unity Engine	Initial setup requires training for both teachers and students to effectively use the technology.
19	Integration of AR with AI for Medical Learning: Springer, 2021.	Machine Learning, TensorFlow, ARCore.	AI-powered AR systems personalize learning experiences. Adapting to student learning pace and providing feedback. Technologies Used: Machine Learning, TensorFlow AI, ARCore	Ethical concerns about AI-driven education, such as bias in data and reliability of AI interpretations.
20	Augmented Reality for Human Organ Identification: IEEE Transactions on Learning Technologies, 2023.	Google Lens AR, Computer Vision AR mapping	AR enhances real-time scanning and identification of organs using mobile applications and wearable devices. Technologies Used: Google Lens AR, Computer Vision-based AR mapping	Limited hardware accessibility—not all students or institutions can afford AR-compatible devices.
21	Use of AR for Interactive Medical Learning in Universities: Journal of Interactive Learning, 2022.	3D Holographic Display, Augmented Haptics	Enables virtual dissections, reducing the need for cadavers. Eliminating ethical concerns related to traditional dissection. 3D Holographic Display, Augmented Haptics	The accuracy of AR models depends on the quality of anatomical data sources used in development.
22	Mobile-Based AR Applications for Anatomy Education: ACM Transactions on Human-Computer Interaction, 2020	Android ARCore, Apple ARKit, WebAR	Portable AR solutions allow on-the-go learning, making anatomy education accessible to remote learners. Android ARCore, Apple ARKit, WebAR	Screen size limitations in mobile devices can restrict detailed examination of smaller organ structures.

23	Comparing VR and AR for Medical Training: Journal of Healthcare Simulation, 2021	HTC Vive, Oculus Quest, AR Simulation Toolkit	VR provides full immersion, but AR offers real-world interaction Makes it better suited for applied learning scenarios. HTC Vive, Oculus Quest, AR Simulation Toolkit	VR lacks integration with real-world patient interaction, making AR a more practical option.
24	AR-Assisted Surgery Training for Medical Students: Elsevier, 2023.	HoloLens, Neural Hand Tracking	AR bridges the gap between theoretical learning and practical training. Allows students to practice on virtual patients. HoloLens, Neural Hand Tracking for Surgery Simulation	Requires specialized AR hardware, increasing cost barriers for widespread adoption.
25	Evaluation of AR-Based Organ Dissection Simulations: IEEE Access, 2022.	Haptic Gloves, AR-Embedded Dissection Tools	AR-based dissections offer high-fidelity simulations. Reduces the reliance on cadavers while maintaining educational effectiveness. Haptic Gloves, AR-Embedded Dissection Tools	Lacks the tactile feedback of real dissections, which is crucial for surgical training.
26	Real-Time AR-Based Anatomy Learning for Medical Students: Nature Scientific Reports, 2021.	AR Smart Glasses, AI Study Assistants	Students exhibit better retention rates. Improved recall ability when learning through AR-based anatomy apps. AR-enhanced Smart Glasses, AI-driven Study Assistants	Integration challenges with traditional medical curricula, which are slow to adopt digital methods.
27	Holographic AR for Human Anatomy Teaching: Springer, 2023.	Holographic Projection, AI-based 3D Rendering	Holographic projections enhance depth perception. Makes learning more engaging. Holographic Projection, AI-based 3D Rendering	High cost and controlled lighting requirements limit its adoption.
28	Augmented Reality in	Medical Scenario AR Overlays	AR improves understanding of organ functions and the relationship between	Limited specialized nursing content, as most AR applications focus on general different physiological systems. Medical Scenario Simulations with AR overlays	medical education.

Table 2.1

2.1 Literature Survey:

1. "The Effectiveness of Augmented Reality in Anatomy Education" Moro, C., Štromberga, Z., Raikos, A., & Stirling, A., 2017

   This study demonstrates that AR tools enhance spatial understanding of anatomical structures. It shows that students using AR for anatomy lessons performed better and had higher engagement levels compared to traditional 2D learning methods.

2. "Augmented Reality Applications in Health Education" Küçük, S., Kapakin, S., & Göktaş, Y., 2016

   This paper discusses AR's role in visualizing 3D models of organs, improving understanding of spatial relationships and organ functionality. The findings indicate that AR enhances knowledge retention and practical skills, particularly in medical training.

3. "Collaborative Learning in Augmented Reality: The Case of Anatomy Education", Bork, F., Stratmann, L., Engele, L., Eck, U., Navab, N., Waschke, J., & Kugelmann, D., 2019

   This study focuses on how AR enhances collaborative learning in anatomy. It highlights that students using AR work better in groups and can manipulate and explore 3D organ models together, leading to improved teamwork and understanding of anatomical concepts.

4. "Augmented Reality in Medical Education: A Scoping Review", Ye, Z., Zhang, H., & Zhang, L., 2020

   This paper reviews the implementation of AR in medical education, emphasizing its ability to democratize access to anatomy education. It discusses the scalability and cost-effectiveness of AR as an alternative to cadaver-based dissections, especially in under-resourced educational settings.

5. "Augmented Reality Enhances Anatomy Learning in Preclinical Medical Education: A Randomized Controlled Trial", Bogomolova, K., van der Ham, I. J., Dankbaar, M. E., & van den Broek, W. W., 2021

   This randomized controlled trial examines the effectiveness of AR in preclinical anatomy education. It finds that AR improves spatial awareness and retention of anatomical knowledge, suggesting that AR tools can significantly enhance student learning outcomes.

6. "Augmented Reality and the Future of Education in Anatomy", Yammine, K., 2018

   Yammine's paper explores how AR can revolutionize the future of anatomy education by providing detailed, updatable models of human organs. The study discusses the potential for AR to become an essential tool in both academic and professional medical training environments.

7. “Interactive Augmented Reality for Enhanced Anatomy Learning: A Systematic Review”, Chen, F., King, A., & Wong, L., 2020

   This systematic review discusses the advantages of using interactive AR in anatomy education. The authors found that AR significantly enhances student engagement and understanding, while providing an immersive learning experience compared to traditional static learning tools.

8. “Evaluating Augmented Reality in the Anatomy Lab: A Comparative Study”, Goudarzi, M., Hassanpour, S., & Mak, C., 2019

   This comparative study evaluates the use of AR against traditional dissection methods in anatomy lab setting. The results show that AR is equally effective in helping students understand human organ structures while also providing a more engaging and less resource-intensive alternative to dissections.

9. “The Impact of Augmented Reality on Medical Students' Learning of Human Organs”, Akl, E. A., Ghamloush, R., & Darzi, A., 2018

   This paper analyzes how AR enhances the learning of human organ systems in medical education. It reports that students using AR demonstrate better long-term retention of organ anatomy and functionality, particularly in comparison to lecture-based learning.

10. “Augmented Reality and Anatomy Education: Benefits for Visual and Spatial Learning”, Zhang, J., Du, X., & Xie, W., 2021

    This study focuses on how AR benefits students with different learning preferences, particularly visual and spatial learners. It finds that students who struggle with understanding 2D representations of organs benefit greatly from the 3D, interactive nature of AR.

11. “Augmented Reality Systems in Human Anatomy Learning: A Review”, Hossain, M., Kamal, A., & Tan, A., 2019

    This review paper examines various AR systems used in human anatomy education. It highlights how AR applications enhance learning outcomes, provide a more engaging experience, and allow students to learn at their own pace, ultimately improving retention and comprehension.

12. “Augmented Reality for Self-Paced Learning of Human Organs”, Patel, R., Hughes, T., & Li, J.,2022

    Patel’s paper explores how AR can be used for self-paced learning in anatomy education. The study concludes that AR allows students to revisit complex concepts independently, improving their confidence and mastery of human internal organ structure.

13. "Enhancing Medical Education with AR: A Systematic Review" – Journal of Medical Education (2023)

This study explored how AR improves cognitive engagement by enabling students to interact with 3D models of human organs, resulting in better retention of complex anatomical concepts. Key findings include improved spatial understanding and engagement compared to traditional learning methods. Limitations involve high implementation costs and the lack of standardized curricula, making widespread adoption challenging.

14. "The Role of AR in Anatomy Learning: A Comparative Study" – *IEEE Xplore (2022)

The research compared AR-based anatomy learning with conventional teaching methods and found that AR enhances spatial understanding, depth perception, and retention. Key findings indicate that students who used AR performed better in identifying anatomical structures. Limitations include the high cost of AR headsets and technical issues with real-time rendering.

15. "Real-Time AR for Human Organ Visualization" – *Springer (2023)

This study investigated how real-time AR-based visualization helps in understanding organ functionality through interactive 3D models. Key findings reveal improved conceptual clarity and engagement. Limitations include the dependency on anatomical databases, which require continuous updates for accuracy.

16. "Reducing Cognitive Load in Anatomy Education Using AR" – *Elsevier (2021)

The study examined AR's impact on cognitive load reduction during anatomy learning. Key findings show that AR-based lessons simplify complex concepts, making them easier to grasp. Limitations include device compatibility issues, as some students find AR tools less intuitive than traditional models.

17. "AR-Based Medical Training for Future Surgeons" – *Nature Scientific Reports (2022)

The study analyzed AR's effectiveness in surgical education by simulating real-life procedures. Key findings suggest that students who trained using AR demonstrated higher procedural accuracy. Limitations include high costs and limited haptic feedback, making it difficult to simulate realistic surgical sensations.

18. "Augmented Reality and Neuroscience Learning" – *Frontiers in Neuroscience (2021)

This paper explored how AR impacts neuroscience education by allowing students to visualize the human brain in 3D. Key findings highlight better conceptual retention and engagement. Limitations include technical constraints, such as frame rate drops affecting real-time interaction.

19. "Impact of AR on Medical Students' Learning Experience" – PLOS ONE (2020)

The study surveyed medical students using AR-based anatomy tools and found enhanced engagement and retention. Key findings suggest students preferred AR models over 2D images. Limitations include limited availability of AR content across different anatomical regions.

20.* "Development of an AR-Based Human Organ Learning App" – *ACM Digital Library (2023)

This research focused on designing an AR-based mobile app for learning human organ systems. Key findings show that interactive applications increase student interest and motivation. Limitations include compatibility issues across different devices.

21. "AR vs. Traditional Textbooks: A Learning Outcome Comparison" – Education Information Technologies (2021)

This study compared AR models with traditional textbooks for anatomy learning. Key findings indicate AR users showed higher retention and comprehension rates. Limitations include longer adaptation periods for students unfamiliar with AR technology.

22. "The Use of AR in Nursing Education: A Review" – BMC Medical Education (2022)

This review analyzed AR's role in nursing education, particularly in organ-based studies. Key findings suggest higher engagement and confidence among nursing students. Limitations include a lack of specialized AR nursing content.

3. PROPOSED WORK

3.1 Requirement Analysis

3.1.1 Scope

The scope for Augmented Reality (AR) in education, particularly for studying human internal organs, is vast and continuously evolving. AR offers significant advancements in how students learn about complex anatomical structures, enhancing traditional methods of teaching and providing a more immersive and interactive experience. One of the most significant applications of AR is in medical and healthcare education. AR-based simulations enable medical students to explore detailed 3D models of human organs, allowing for enhanced understanding of anatomy, surgical procedures, and clinical practices. Students can interact with virtual organs, simulating dissections or surgeries in a risk-free environment, which improves their practical skills and comprehension.

The AR allows students to visualize human internal organs in three dimensions, from any angle, and with various levels of magnification. This ability to interact with virtual models helps students grasp complex spatial relationships between organs, systems, and tissues in ways that are difficult to achieve with textbooks or traditional 2D methods. AR-based educational tools provide personalized learning experiences tailored to different learning styles. Students can engage with interactive content, exploring organ systems at their own pace, revisiting challenging concepts, and receiving real-time feedback through quizzes or adaptive learning platforms.

In summary the scope for AR in human anatomy education is vast, with applications across various levels of medical training, healthcare, and allied sciences. The growing adoption of AR technologies in classrooms, labs, and professional training environments indicates that AR will play an increasingly important role in shaping the future of anatomy education. [15]

3.1.2 Feasibility Study

1. Technical Feasibility:

   i. Availability of AR devices like Microsoft HoloLens, Magic Leap, and AR-enabled smartphones. Existing platforms such as Unity and Unreal Engine offer robust AR development tools for medical applications.

   ii. Platforms like Unity and Unreal Engine have been instrumental in developing AR applications, especially in the medical field. These engines offer powerful 3D modeling capabilities, real-time rendering, and support for various AR hardware.

   iii. Unity, for instance, is widely used in medical applications because of its cross-platform compatibility, making it easy to develop for multiple devices (HoloLens, smartphones, etc.) from a single codebase.

2. Economic Feasibility:

   i. Initial costs for AR development may include purchasing hardware, software licenses, and employing specialized developers. Developing AR applications for the medical field requires specialized skills.

   ii. AR development, 3D modeling, and integration with medical datasets are advanced tasks, requiring a team of developers, designers, and domain experts. This increases the initial costs, but the return on investment could be significant due to the long-term value in education and training.

3. Operational Feasibility:

   i. AR interfaces can be designed to be intuitive for medical professionals with minimal training. Mobile AR applications make the technology accessible on widely used devices like tablets and smartphones.

   ii. The proliferation of smartphones and tablets with AR capabilities ensures that AR can be deployed widely in medical education. Since many institutions already use tablets or mobile devices in classrooms and training facilities, integrating AR into these systems could be a smooth transition. Moreover, apps can be developed for both Android and iOS platforms to ensure maximum reach.

4. Social Feasibility:

   i. Through Patient Acceptance AR can make healthcare more transparent, helping patients visualize and understand their conditions, improving trust and compliance.

   ii. For example, AR can overlay 3D models of an organ on the patient’s own body, showing where a tumor is located or how an illness is affecting the organ. This improves patients' understanding of their conditions, leading to greater trust in their healthcare

iii. providers.

5. Educational Needs:

   i. Traditional teaching methods (e.g., cadavers, textbooks) have limitations in terms of availability, access, and the ability to interact dynamically. AR can bridge these gaps.

   ii. AR also provides an opportunity to enhance traditional learning. Students can interact with dynamic, 3D models of organs, rotate them to view from different angles, zoom in for detailed structures, and explore functional aspects in ways that textbooks cannot provide. This interactive experience helps improve retention and comprehension.

6. Medical Training:

   i. Surgeons and medical professionals could benefit from AR simulations to practice techniques in a controlled environment.

   ii. Surgeons and medical professionals could benefit immensely from AR simulations that allow them to practice complex procedures, such as surgery, in a controlled and risk-free environment.

   iii. For instance, AR can simulate a surgical operation where trainees can perform procedures on virtual organs in a way that mimics real-life anatomy and conditions. This type of practice is less costly and safer compared to traditional methods, such as using cadavers or human patients.

7. Research and Development:

   i. Researchers in biotechnology, pharmaceuticals, and medicine could use AR to simulate various organ conditions for better understanding of diseases and treatments.

   ii. Researchers can leverage AR to simulate different conditions of organs, allowing them to better understand how diseases develop or how treatments interact with the body. For example, AR could model a heart with coronary artery disease, enabling researchers to see how blood flow changes and visualize the effects of different drugs or surgical interventions.

   iii. Pharmaceutical companies could also use AR to demonstrate how their drugs interact with specific organs or to show potential side effects. Researchers, in turn, can use this immersive visualization to develop more effective treatments, allowing them to “see” complex biological processes in new ways. [20]

3.1.3 Hardware and Software Requirements

Requirements
Software	Hardware
Unity Hub	Processor: Intel i7 or better
AR Foundation	GPU: NVIDIA GeForce RTX series or equivalent
Google AR Core	Android/iOS Device
Android Studio	RAM: Minimum 16 GB
MS Visual Studio Editor	Android 7.0 +

Table 3.1.3.1

Hardware Requirements:

1. Development:

a) Processor: Intel i7 or better
b) GPU: NVIDIA GeForce RTX series or equivalent
c) Android/iOS Device
d) RAM: Minimum 16 GB
e) Android 7.0 +

2. Testing:

a) OS: Windows, Linux
b) Web Browser: Brave, Chrome, Mozilla Firefox

3. User:

a) PC, Laptop, Mobile Device

Software Requirements:

1. Unity Hub:

Unity Hub is an application that serves as the launcher and central hub for Unity, a popular game development engine. It provides an organized way to manage and work with Unity projects and versions. Unity Hub is essential for AR development as it manages the Unity Editor, where you'll create and manage AR applications. It ensures all the necessary versions and modules are available to work with AR technologies.

2. AR Foundation:

AR Foundation is a cross-platform framework provided by Unity to develop augmented reality applications for both iOS and Android. It allows you to use the same codebase and development workflow for AR apps that run on multiple devices. AR Foundation is crucial when building AR apps using Unity, as it abstracts the complexity of dealing with platform-specific APIs (like ARKit for iOS or ARCore for Android). It streamlines the development process by providing a unified toolkit to implement AR features in your app.

3. Google ARCore:

ARCore is Google's platform for building augmented reality apps on Android devices. It provides the underlying technology for creating immersive AR experiences by enabling the device to sense its environment, track motion, and understand its position in space. Google ARCore provides the low-level functionality needed for AR apps on Android devices. It allows developers to build robust AR applications with features like surface detection, motion tracking, and environmental understanding, all of which are necessary for an immersive AR experience. When developing with Unity and AR Foundation, ARCore provides the platform-specific functionality for Android devices.

4. Android Studio:

Android Studio is the official integrated development environment (IDE) for building Android applications. It includes tools and features specifically designed for developing Android apps, such as code editing, debugging, and performance analysis. While Unity is primarily used for creating the AR application, Android Studio is used to handle the Android-specific aspects of the project. For example, if you want to integrate Unity-based AR into an Android app, Android Studio would handle the native Android parts of the app (such as permissions, UI integration, and managing Android device features).

5. MS Visual Studio Editor:

Microsoft Visual Studio is a powerful IDE commonly used for software development, including Unity development. It provides advanced tools for coding, debugging, and version control. Visual Studio Editor is often used as the primary code editor when working with Unity, especially if you're coding in C#. For AR applications, Visual Studio is beneficial for writing scripts that control the behavior of AR elements, handle user interactions, and manage the overall logic of the application.

3.2 PROBLEM STATEMENT

Visually Despite advances in medical education and technology, traditional methods of learning human anatomy often fall short in providing an interactive, 3D understanding of complex bodily structures. Textbooks, cadavers, and static models are limited in their ability to demonstrate dynamic processes and spatial relationships within the body.

As a result, medical professionals face challenges in visualizing anatomy during surgeries, patient education, and treatment planning. There is a critical need for immersive, technology-driven solutions like Augmented Reality (AR) to enhance the learning experience, improve surgical precision, and bridge the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application.

3.3 PROJECT DESIGN

3.3.1 Proposed Algorithm

1. Initialize the AR Environment:

Camera feed from the user's device (smartphone, tablet, or AR headset).
Access the device's camera to capture real-time visual data. Initialize AR tracking to identify the various physical environment (flat surfaces, spatial features, etc.).
Set up the virtual environment, where digital 3D models will be overlaid onto the real-world view.

2. Detect Surface and Positioning:

Continuous data from the AR tracking system (e.g., Google AR Core or ARKit).
Use marker-based or marker less tracking to detect and map flat surfaces.
Anchor virtual objects (human organ models) onto detected surfaces based on user's preferences.
Calculate the real-time position and orientation (pose) of the user's device relative to the anchored 3D model.

3. Load 3D Models of Human Organs:

User's selection of an organ (e.g., heart, lungs, liver) from a menu interface.
Retrieve and load the corresponding 3D model from a database or cloud storage.
Include different layers (e.g., muscles, vessels, tissues) to represent the organ in detail.
Preload textures, animations, and annotations for enhanced interaction.
Display the selected organ in augmented reality, anchored to the detected surface.

4. Enable User Interaction:

User's touch gestures or voice commands.
Detect gestures like zoom, rotate, and pan using device sensors (gyroscope, accelerometer).
Zooming: Pinch gesture to zoom in and out on specific organ details.
Rotation: Dragging to rotate the organ, allowing a 360° view from different angles.

3.3.2 Diagrams

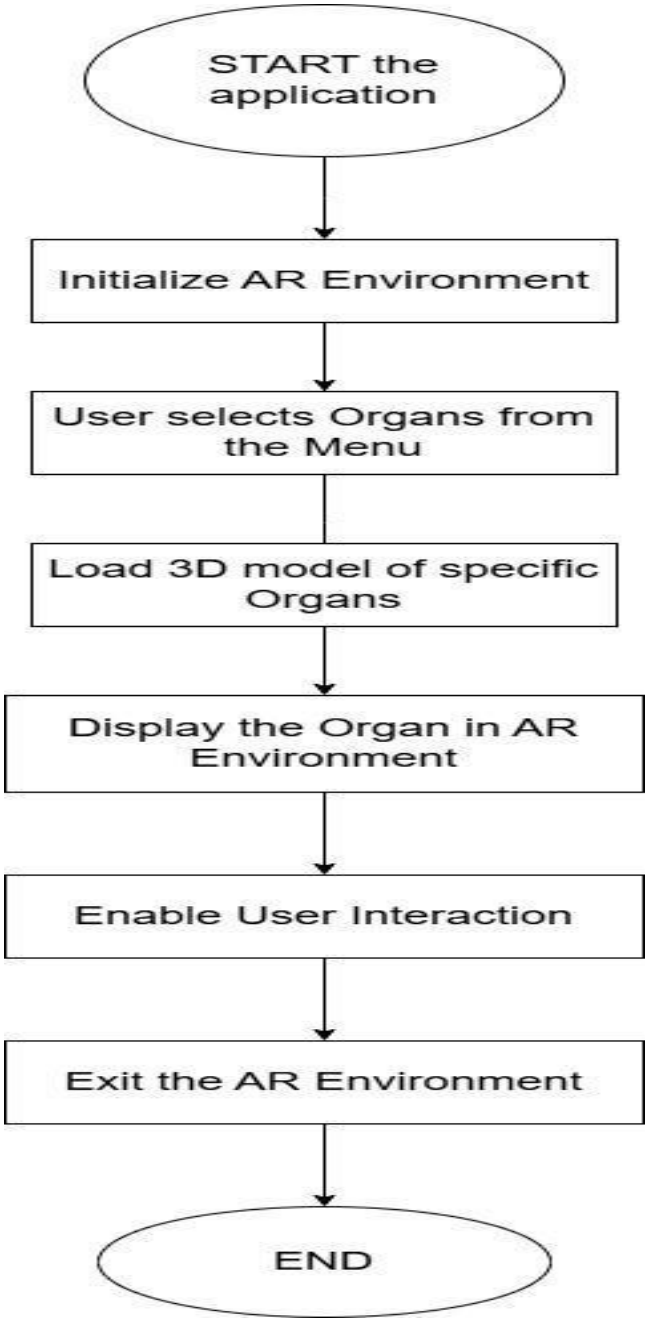

Fig 3.3.2.1 – System Flowchart

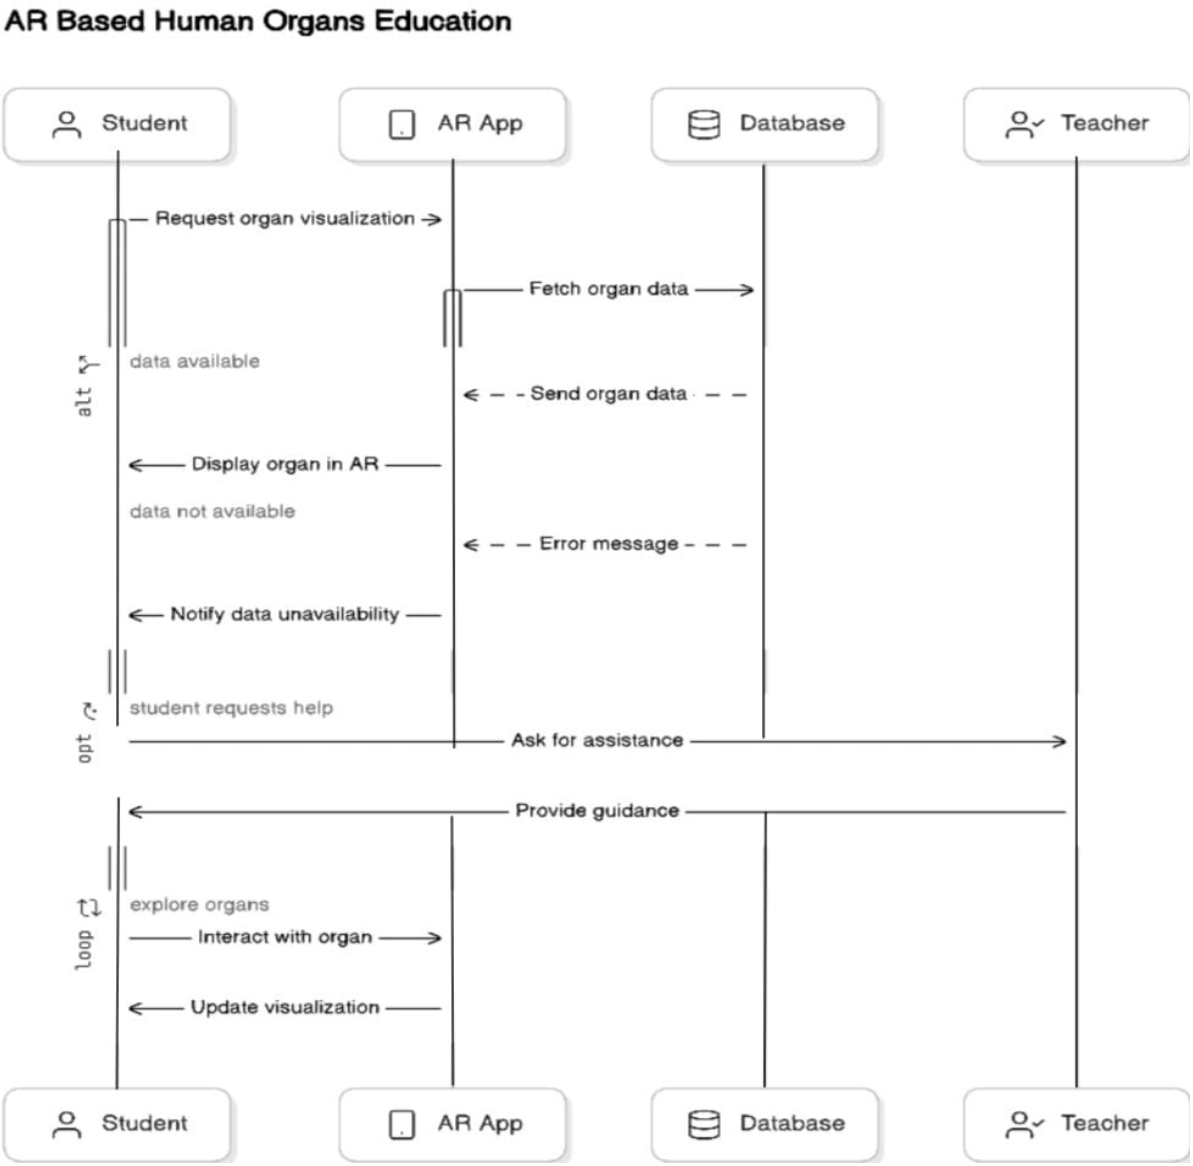
The image is a system flowchart outlining the steps of an augmented reality (AR) application for displaying and interacting with 3D models of organs.



3.3.2.2 - UML Component Diagram

The sequence diagram for an AR-Based Human Organs Education System illustrates how different system components interact over time. The key participants in this process include the Student, the AR App, the Database, and the Teacher. The interaction begins when the student requests an organ visualization through the AR app. The app then queries the database to retrieve the necessary anatomical data regarding the specific inputs given by the user.

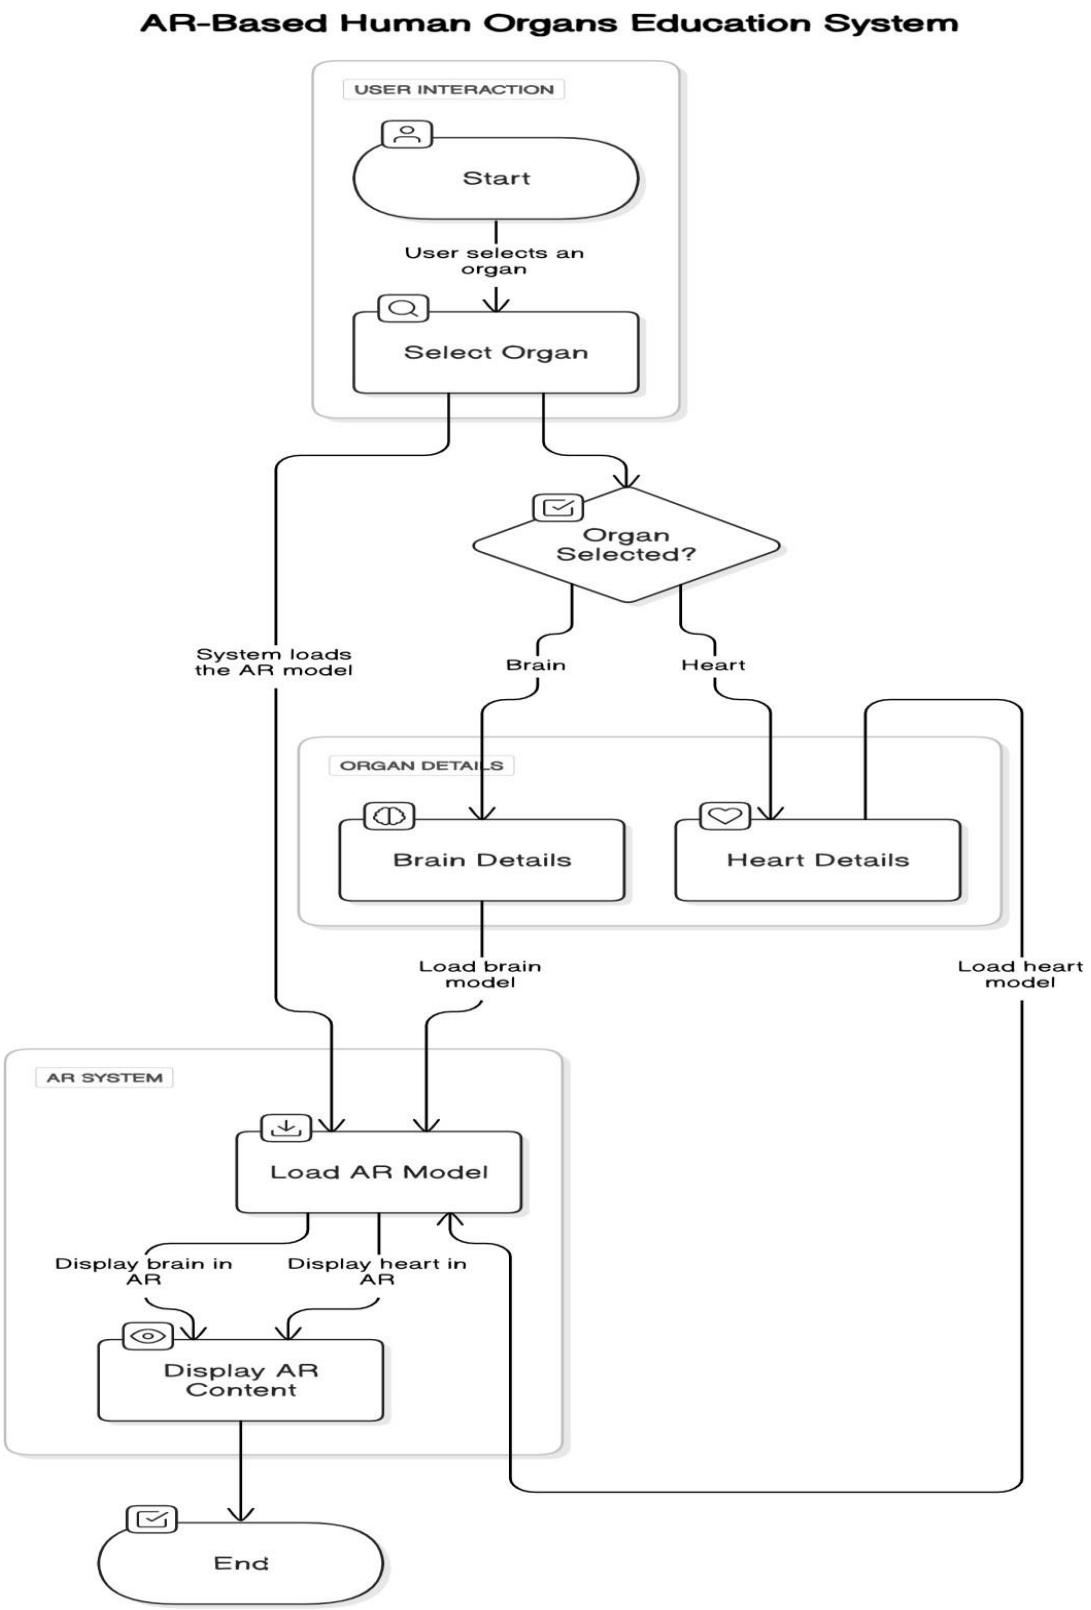


Fig 3.3.2.3 – UML Use Case Diagram

The flowchart represents the AR-Based Human Organs Education System, detailing the interaction between the user and the system. The process begins with user interaction, where the user starts the application and selects an organ for performing the visualization process.

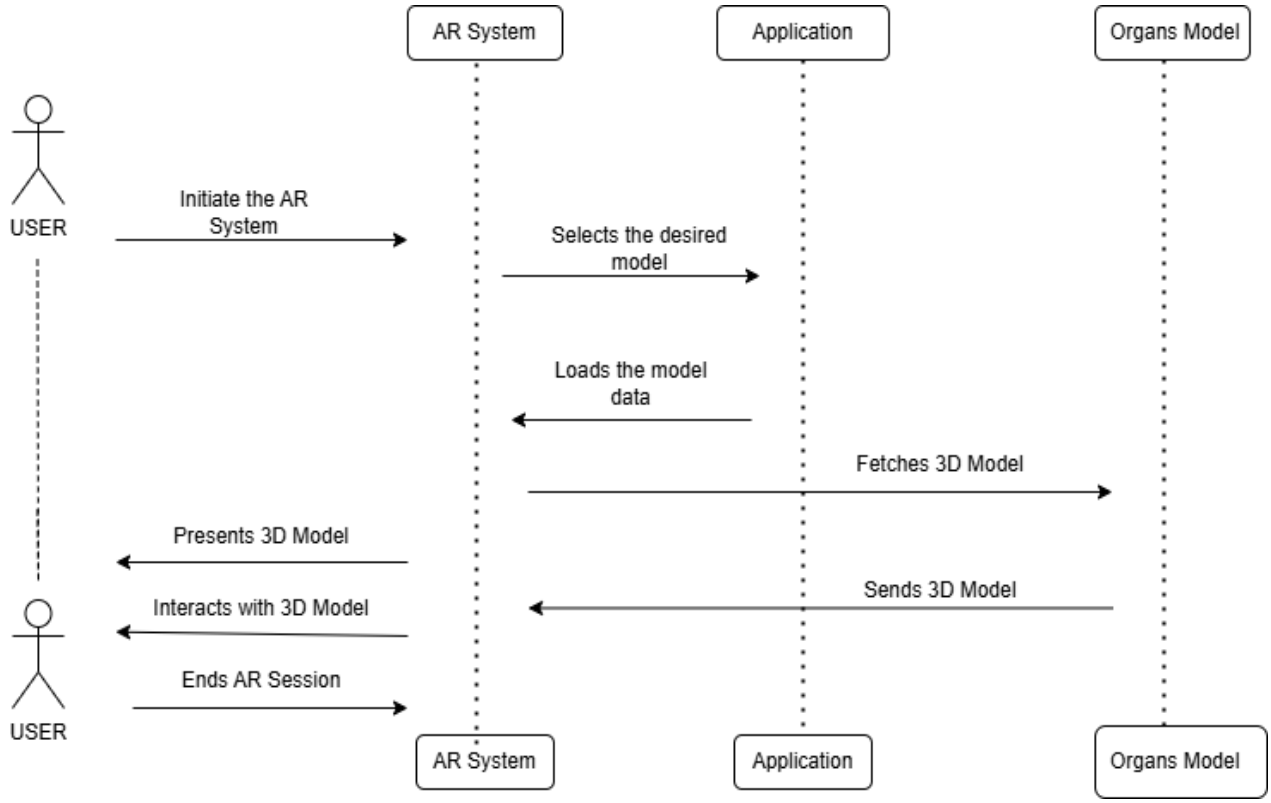

Fig 3.3.2.4 – Sequence Diagram

The diagram represents the workflow of an AR-Based Human Organs Education System using a QR code-based interaction. The process begins when a user interacts with the AR system, which is responsible for rendering augmented reality content. The AR system works in conjunction with a QR code that serves as a trigger for loading specific organ models. When the user scans the QR code, the system retrieves the corresponding organ model from its database. Once the appropriate model is identified, the AR system processes and displays the selected organ in an interaction.

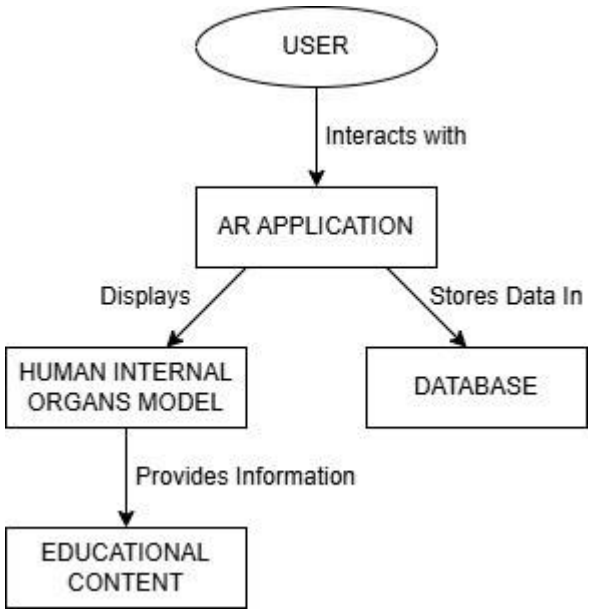

Fig 3.3.2.5- Level 0 DFD

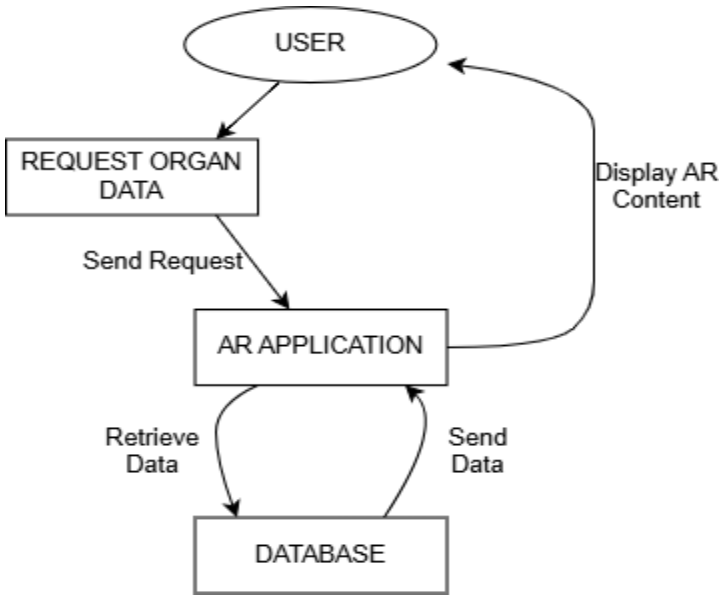

Fig 3.3.2.6- Level 1 DFD

Once the appropriate organ model is retrieved, the AR system processes it by loading the 3D model. The system then displays the selected organ in an augmented reality environment, allowing the user to interact with it. Finally, process concludes when the organ is successfully visualized. This structured workflow ensures a smooth and interactive educational experience by allowing users to explore human organs in AR, enhancing their understanding of anatomy.

3.4 Methodology

The Developing an Augmented Reality (AR) application focused on human internal organs for educational purposes involves a comprehensive methodology that enhances learning and engagement. The first step is to clearly define the objectives of the application, such as helping students understand organ functions, anatomy, or pathology, while also identifying the target audience, which could range from high school students to medical professionals.

A literature review follows, examining existing AR educational tools in anatomy to pinpoint gaps and opportunities for innovation. Content development is crucial, involving the creation or sourcing of accurate 3D models of internal organs, accompanied by detailed educational materials that explain their functions and relevance.

Choosing the right technology is vital; developers should select AR platforms like ARKit, AR Core, or Unity, ensuring compatibility with the devices used by the target audience. An intuitive user experience (UX) design is essential for guiding users through the AR environment, incorporating interactive elements like touch gestures and animations to enhance engagement. A prototype is then developed to test basic functionalities and gather user feedback, which informs necessary adjustments before final implementation.

1. Define Objectives and Target Audience

Clearly outline what you want to achieve with the AR application. For instance, is it to help students understand organ functions, anatomy, or pathology? Identify the age group and educational level of your users (e.g., high school students, medical students).

2. Literature Review

Research existing AR applications in education, particularly in anatomy and biology. Analyze their strengths and weaknesses to identify gaps your application can fill.

3. Content Development

Create or source accurate 3D models of human internal organs. Tools like Blender or Unity can be used for modeling. Develop accompanying educational materials, such as descriptions.

4. Technology Selection

Choose the AR development platform (e.g., ARKit for iOS, AR Core for Android, Unity, Vuforia). Ensure compatibility with the devices your target audience will use.

3.4.1 Green IT Practices Implemented

Green IT practices focus on reducing the environmental impact of technology while maintaining efficiency and effectiveness. In an AR-Based Human Organs Education System, implementing sustainable IT strategies ensures eco-friendly operations. Here are some key Green IT practices integrated into such a system:

1. Energy-Efficient Hardware

i. Using low-power AR devices such as energy-efficient tablets, smartphones, or AR headsets helps reduce energy consumption.

ii. Leveraging optimized GPU processing minimizes excessive power usage while rendering 3D organ models.

2. Cloud Computing for Resource Optimization

i. Storing organ models and AR data on cloud servers reduces the need for high-powered local devices, lowering energy and hardware waste.

ii. Cloud-based rendering can offload processing from user devices to energy-efficient data centres powered by renewable energy sources.

3. Sustainable Software Development

i. Developing lightweight AR applications ensures minimal processing power, reducing device overheating and battery drainage.

ii. Using efficient algorithms for 3D rendering and compression reduces computational load, leading to lower energy consumption.

4. E-Waste Reduction through Extended Device Lifespan

i. Encouraging modular and upgradable AR hardware extends the lifespan of devices, reducing electronic waste.

ii. Implementing AR applications that are compatible with older devices prevents frequent hardware replacements.

5. Digital-First Approach to Reduce Paper Usage

i. Replacing traditional paper-based anatomy textbooks with interactive AR models significantly cuts down paper waste.

ii. Encouraging cloud-based storage of educational materials eliminates the need for printed materials.

6. Sustainable Data Management

i. Optimizing data storage by compressing 3D organ models ensures minimal server space usage, reducing energy demands.

ii. Implementing AI-powered caching and predictive loading helps reduce unnecessary data transfers, lowering energy consumption.

7. Renewable Energy Integration

i. Running AR servers on renewable energy sources such as solar or wind power decreases the system's carbon footprint.

ii. Encouraging solar-powered AR learning stations in educational institutions promotes sustainable energy use.

3.5 IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

3.5.1 Gantt Chart

Tasks	Assigned To	Start Date	End Date	Status
80% Impementation of project	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	08-01-2025	15-01-2025	Complete
Gantt Chart Preparation	Shubham, Suyash	15-01-2025	28-01-2025	Complete
Presentation and Report Prepared	Aryan, Suyash	28-01-2025	29-01-2025	Complete
Project Review 1	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	29-01-2025	12-02-2025	Complete
Partial paper preparation for Publication	Mayank, Shubham, Suyash	12-02-2025	19-03-2025	Complete
Green IT Practices Implemented	Mayank, Aryan	19-03-2025	25-03-2025	Complete
100% Implementation and Presentation	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	25-03-2025	02-04-2025	Complete
Project Review 2	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	02-04-2025	05-04-2025	Complete
Final Report Prepared	Shubham, Suyash	05-04-2025	13-04-2025	Complete
Project Competition Participation & Paper Publication	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	13-04-2025	15-04-2025	Complete
Final Presentation and Report along with Execution	Mayank, Aryan, Shubham, Suyash	15-04-2025	15-04-2025	Complete

Fig 3.5.1.1

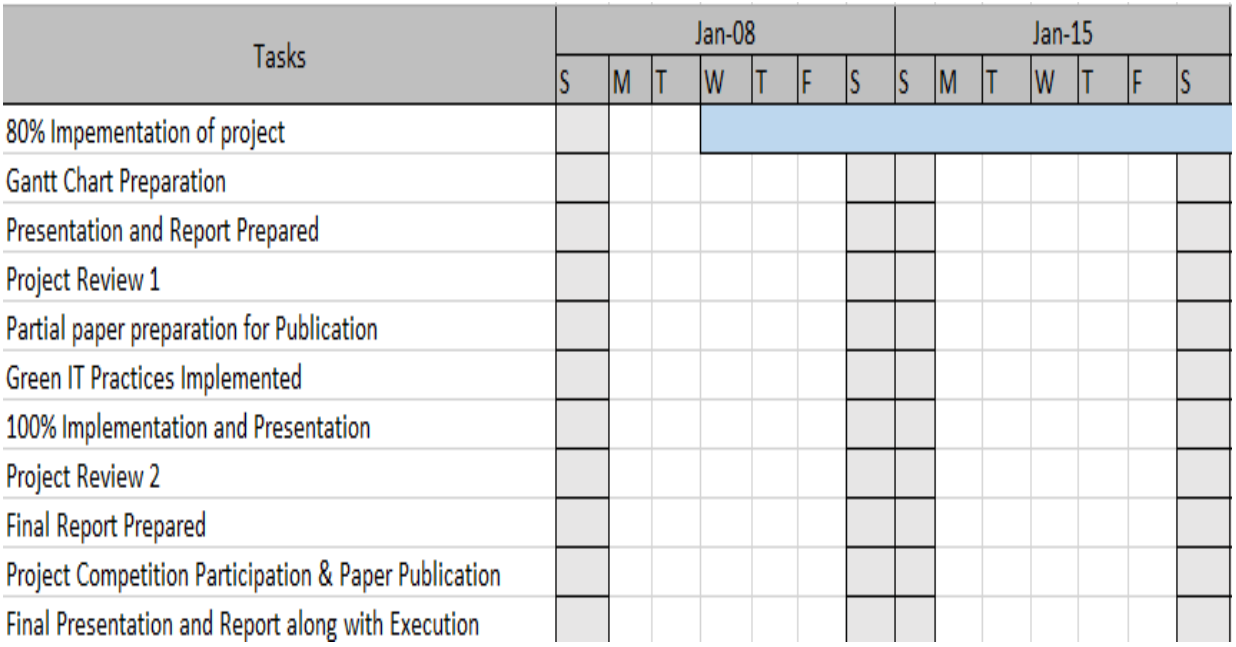

Fig 3.5.1.2

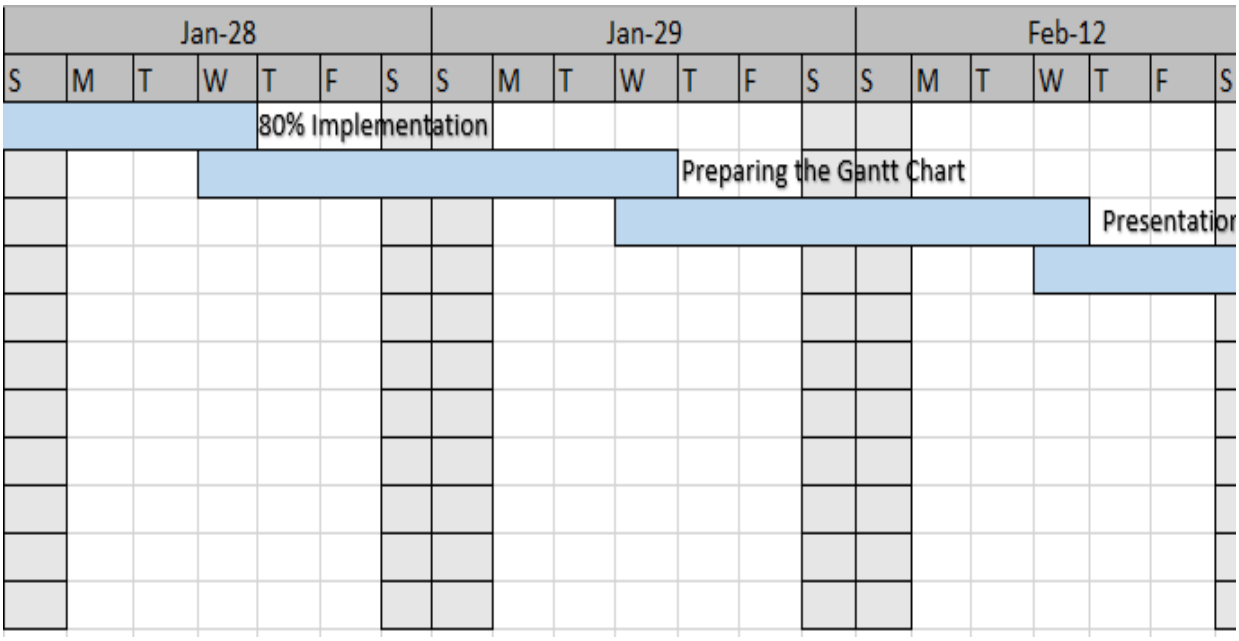

Fig 3.5.1.3

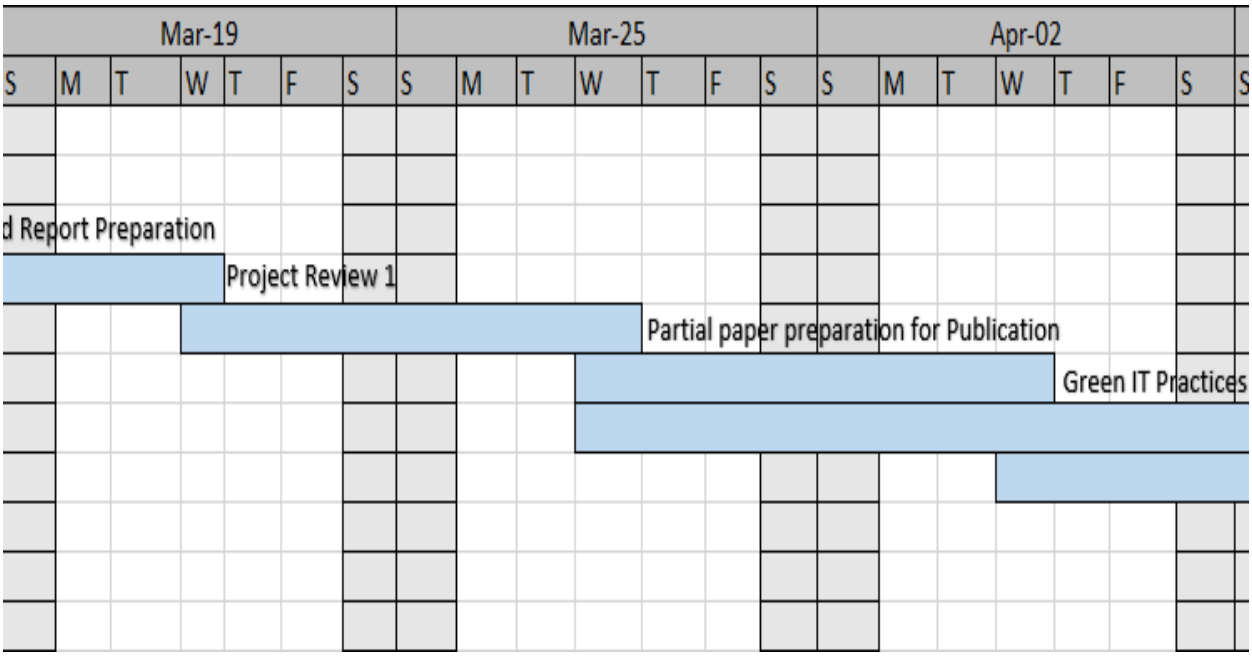

Fig 3.5.1.4

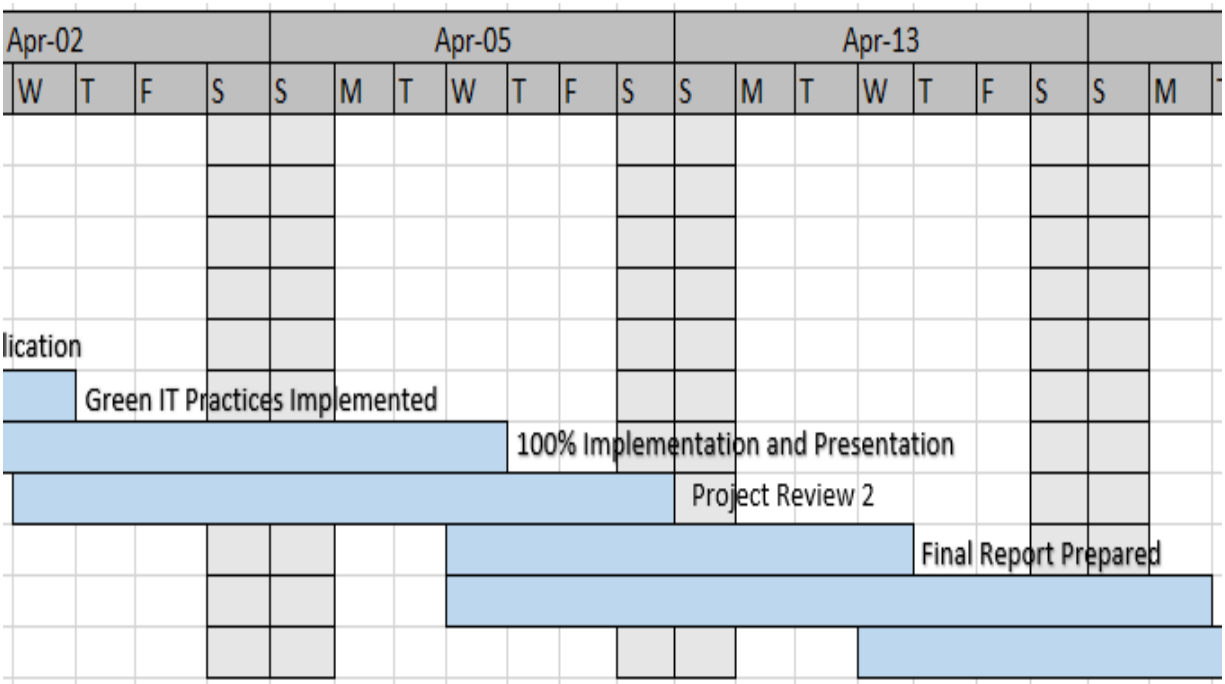

Fig 3.5.1.5

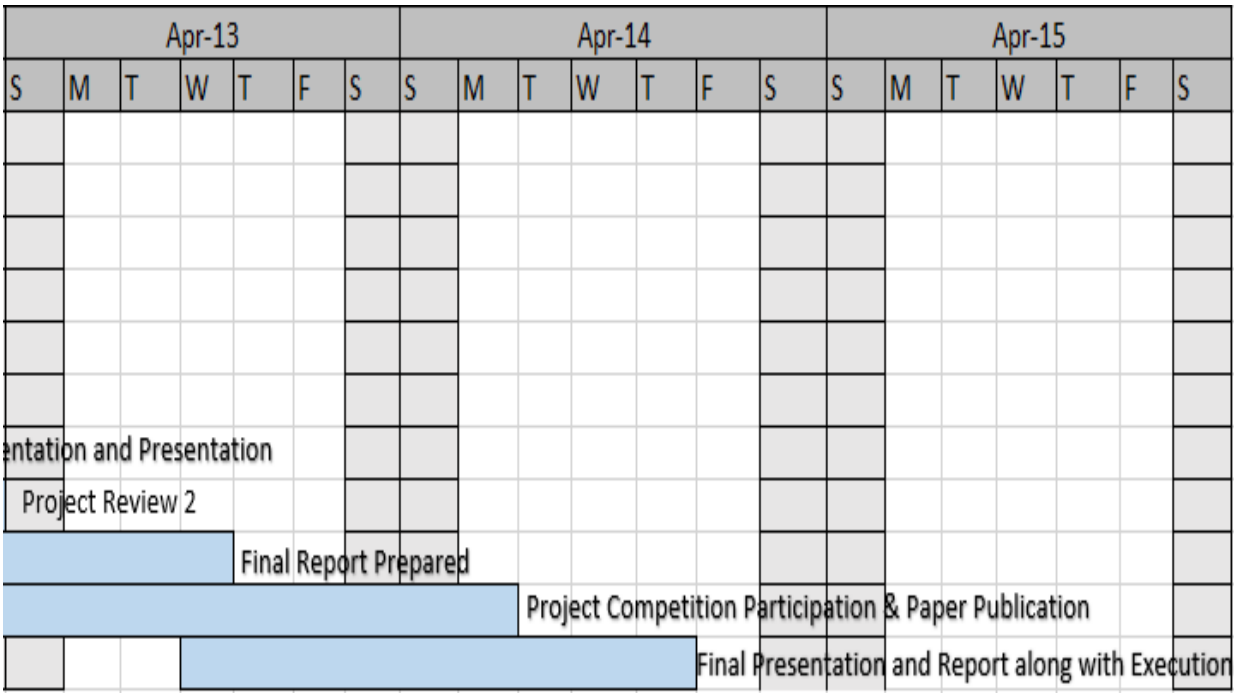

Fig 3.5.1.6

4. TESTING

4.1 Performance Metrics

The testing and performance metrics should focus on both technical aspects (e.g., accuracy, rendering quality, and system performance) and user experience aspects (e.g., usability, engagement, and learning effectiveness). Below is a structured approach:

1. Technical Performance Metrics:

Rendering & Graphics Quality:

a) Frame Rate (FPS): Ensure smooth interaction (target 30-60 FPS).
b) Latency: Measure the time delay between user input and system response (<20 ms is ideal).
c) Polygon Count & Texture Resolution: Optimize for high-quality organ visuals without lag.
d) Lighting & Shading: Assess realism and visibility of anatomical structures.

Tracking & Spatial Accuracy:

a) Marker-Based vs. Marker less Tracking: Evaluate tracking stability and precision.
b) Drift & Alignment: Measure deviation of the AR model from the real-world reference.
c) Occlusion Handling: Ensure accurate overlay when objects obstruct the view.

Compatibility & Hardware Performance:

a) Device Compatibility: Test across different AR-enabled devices (smartphones, AR glasses, tablets).
b) Battery Consumption: Measure power usage during extended use.
c) App Loading & Response Time: Ensure quick startup and minimal lag.

2. Usability Metrics:

User Experience (UX):

a) Ease of Use (SUS Score): Use the System Usability Scale (SUS) for evaluating user satisfaction.
b) Navigation & Interaction: Assess the intuitiveness of gestures and controls.

Engagement & Immersion:

a) Time Spent in AR Mode: Longer usage suggests higher engagement.
b) User Retention & Reuse Rate: Track how often users return to the AR app.

3. Educational Effectiveness Metrics

Knowledge Retention & Learning Outcomes:

a) Pre-Test vs. Post-Test Scores: Assess improvement in anatomical knowledge.
b) Accuracy of Responses: Evaluate how well students identify and explain organs.
c) Long-Term Knowledge Retention: Conduct follow-up tests after days/weeks.

Student Feedback & Perception

a) Likert Scale Ratings (1-5 or 1-7): Collect feedback on clarity, usefulness, and engagement.
b) Qualitative Feedback (Open-Ended Questions): Gather insights on how to improve.

Sr. No	Tool	API	Average Response Time (sec)
1	Organ Visualization	ARKit	5
2	Interactive Anatomy Learning	ARCore	8
3	3D Organ Rotation & Scaling	Unity	6
4	Real-Time Organ Labelling	Unity	9

Table 4.1.1 - Response Time for Services

Throughput (Based on average response time)

Tool	TPM (Transactions Per Minute)
Organ Visualization	12
Interactive Anatomy Learning	10
3D Organ Rotation & Scaling	11
Real-Time Organ Labelling	7

Table 4.1.2 - Throughput

Concurrency and Parallelism

Concurrency and parallelism are crucial for optimizing the AR system's performance and responsiveness. The system uses asynchronous programming to manage tasks like real-time organ rendering, user interactions, and API requests. While simultaneous tracking of multiple organs is limited, the application efficiently processes concurrent tasks for different users, ensuring smooth visualization and responsive AR experiences.

Environmental Impact

The AR system is designed with energy efficiency in mind, leveraging cloud-based processing to reduce on-device power consumption. The dark mode interface helps minimize screen power usage. By optimizing 3D rendering and using efficient algorithms, the system reduces carbon footprint and improves sustainability.

Maintainability

The application is built with modular, scalable architecture, ensuring easy updates and enhancements. It integrates low-code tools, reducing complexity and allowing for rapid customization. The use of open-source frameworks ensures flexibility, adaptability, and long-term maintenance efficiency.

Browser & Device Compatibility

The AR-based system supports all major AR-enabled devices such as smartphones, tablets, and AR headsets (HoloLens, Magic Leap, Meta Quest). It is optimized for WebAR (Chrome, Safari) and app-based experiences (iOS & Android ARKit/ARCore). The system uses progressive enhancements, ensuring smooth performance across various devices.

Database Performance

The system uses cloud-based databases (Firebase, AWS DynamoDB, or MySQL) for seamless data management. It operates efficiently on free-tier and scalable plans, handling high user loads while minimizing latency. Data caching reduces redundant requests, ensuring fast access to anatomical models.

Caching Effectiveness

The AR system optimizes caching by using built-in asset preloading and real-time scene updates. This reduces loading times when rendering 3D models, providing a seamless experience. Local storage and browser caching further improve performance, making the application highly responsive.

4.2 Sustainability Software Metrics:

Sustainability software metrics are essential for evaluating the environmental impact of AR-based educational applications throughout their lifecycle. These metrics help assess factors such as energy consumption, carbon footprint, and resource utilization, ensuring that the system remains efficient and sustainable.

By integrating sustainability-focused design principles, our AR-based system reduces energy consumption, minimizes hardware dependency, and optimizes cloud-based resources. This aligns with our commitment to environmental responsibility and sustainable education.

Sustainability Software Metrics Table for AR-Based Human Organs for

Metric	Development-Related Attributes	Usage-Related Attributes	Process-Related Attributes
Environmental Benefits
Minimize resource usage by using cloud computing	✓	✓	✓
Reduce hardware dependency by enabling WebAR	✓	✓	✓
Optimize 3D rendering for lower energy consumption	✓	✓	✓
Social Benefits
Reduce barriers to anatomical learning	✓	✓	✓
Enable widespread adoption of AR for education	✓	✓	✓
Improve accessibility for remote learning	✓	✓	✓
Economic Benefits
Minimize costs by using cloud resources efficiently	✓	✓	✓
Reduce maintenance expenses by using scalable architecture	✓	✓	✓
Increase student engagement, leading to higher knowledge retention	✓	✓	✓

4.2.1 Sustainability Software Metric

Sustainability Formulae for AR-Based Human Organs for Education

In addition to the above metrics, our project incorporates value-based software metrics for assessing long-term sustainability and maintainability:

a) System Stability = Efficient Couplings / (Afferent Couplings + Efferent Couplings) = 0.280
b) Code Abstraction = Number of Abstract Classes in a Given Package = 0.12

These metrics help us ensure that our AR-based system remains sustainable, scalable, and effective in delivering high-quality anatomy education while minimizing environmental impact.

Support & Testing Metrics for AR-Based Human Organs for Education

a) Support rate = Users requiring assistance / Total minutes used in usability study = 0.4
b) Defect Density = Known defects / Lines of Code (LOC) = 4/900 = 0.00444
c) Testing Efficiency = Defects found per day of testing = 4/8 = 0.5
d) Testing Effectiveness = Defects found and removed / Defects found = 1

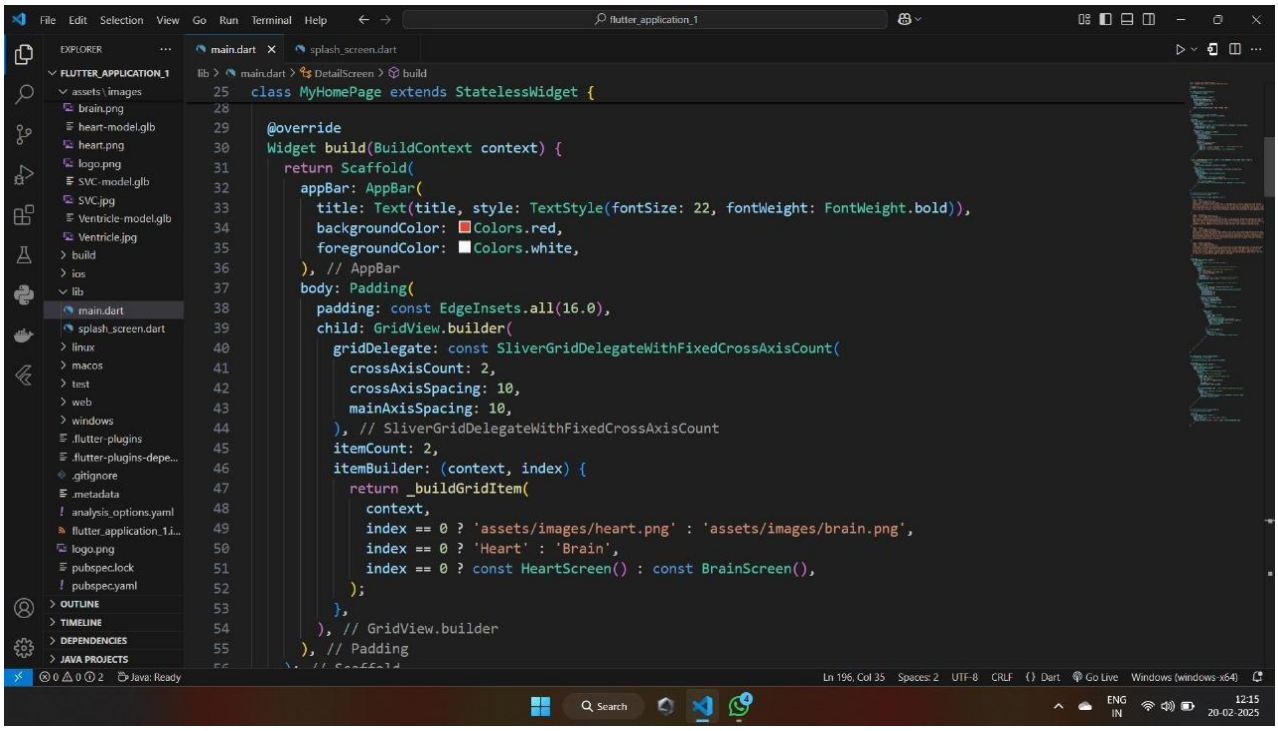
4.3 Test Cases

Test Case ID	Objectives	Pre-requisite	Steps	Input Data	Expected Output	Actual Output	Status
AR_01	Test AR model rendering of the human heart	AR-supported device, camera enabled	1. Open app 2. Select 'Heart' from organ list 3. Point camera	Organ: Heart	3D AR heart model appears over real-world surface	3D AR heart model appears correctly	PASS
AR_02	Test organ labeling functionality	AR heart model active	1. Tap 'Label Parts' button 2. View model	Organ: Heart	Labels like 'Left Atrium', 'Right Ventricle', etc. appear on model	All major parts labeled accurately	PASS
AR_03	Test zoom and rotate functionality on AR organ model	Organ model rendered	1. Pinch to zoom 2. Swipe to rotate	Touch gestures	Model zooms in/out and rotates smoothly	Zoom and rotation function as expected	PASS
AR_04	Test interaction with organ descriptions	Organ model rendered	1. Tap a labeled part	Label: 'Left Ventricle'	Text/audio description of 'Left Ventricle' appears	Correct description displayed	PASS
AR_05	Test switching between organ models	At least two organs in library	1. Select 'Liver' from list	Organ: Liver	AR model of liver replaces the current organ	AR liver model appears and interacts normally	PASS
AR_06	Test loading time of AR organ model	AR-ready environment	1. Select organ and wait for rendering	Organ: Brain	Model loads within 5 seconds	Model loads in 3 seconds	PASS
AR_07	Test audio narration of organ function	AR model rendered	1. Tap on 'Play Audio'	Organ: Stomach	Audio explaining function of stomach plays	Audio plays clearly and matches description	PASS

Table 4.3.1 - Use Cases

5. RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

5.1 CODE



```
class MyHomePage extends StatelessWidget {

  @override
  Widget build(BuildContext context) { return Scaffold( appBar: AppBar(
        title: Text(title, style: TextStyle(fontSize: 22, fontWeight: FontWeight.bold)), backgroundColor: Colors.red,
        foregroundColor: Colors.white,
      ), // AppBar body: Padding(
        padding: const EdgeInsets.all(16.0), child: GridView.builder( gridDelegate: const SliverGridDelegateWithFixedCrossAxisCount( crossAxisCount: 2,
            crossAxisSpacing: 10,
            mainAxisSpacing: 10,
          ), // SliverGridDelegateWithFixedCrossAxisCount
          itemCount: 2,
          itemBuilder: (context, index) { return _buildGridItem( context,
              index == 0 ? 'assets/images/heart.png' : 'assets/images/brain.png', index == 0 ? 'Heart' : 'Brain',
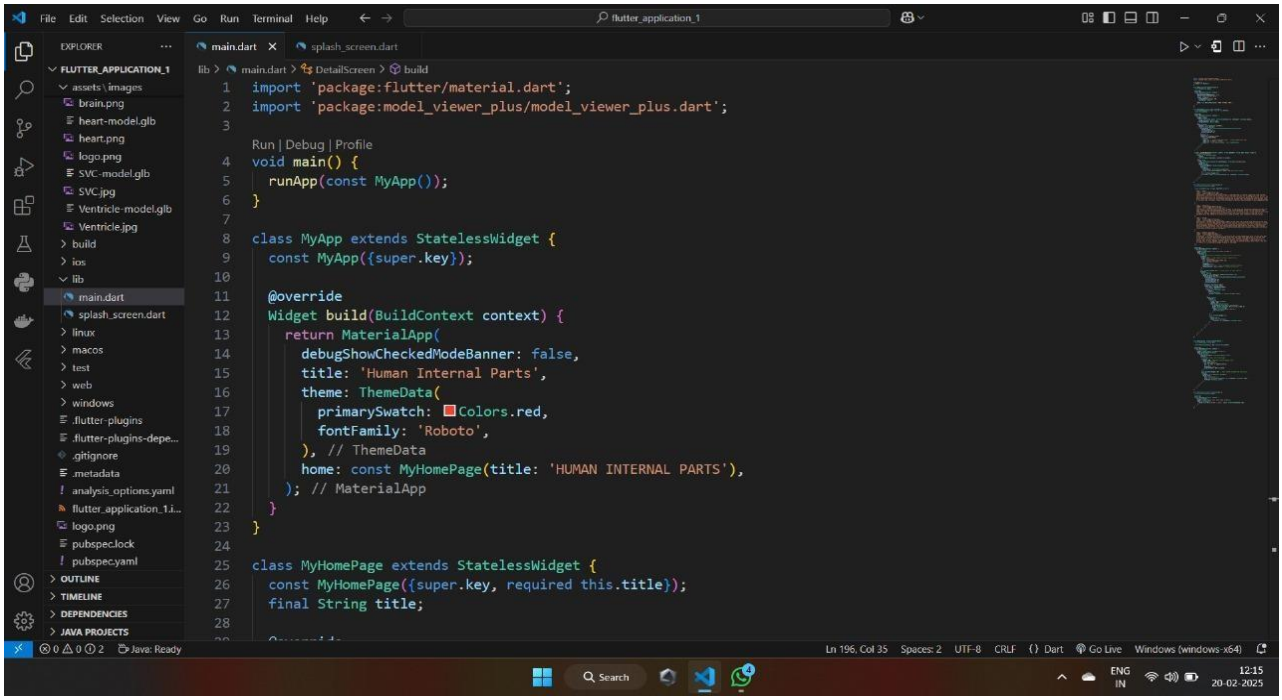
              index == 0 ? const HeartScreen() : const BrainScreen(),
            );
          },
        ), // GridView.builder
      ), // Padding
```

Fig 5.1 Frontend Code



```
import 'package:flutter/material.dart';
import 'package:model_viewer_plus/model_viewer_plus.dart';

Run | Debug | Profile
void main() {
  runApp(const MyApp());
}

class MyApp extends StatelessWidget {
  const MyApp({super.key});

  @override
  Widget build(BuildContext context) {
    return MaterialApp( debugShowCheckedModeBanner: false,
      title: 'Human Internal Parts', theme: ThemeData(
        primarySwatch: Colors.red,
        fontFamily: 'Roboto',
      ), // ThemeData
      home: const MyHomePage(title: 'HUMAN INTERNAL PARTS'),
    ); // MaterialApp
  }
}

class MyHomePage extends StatelessWidget {
  const MyHomePage({super.key, required this.title});
  final String title;
```

Fig 5.2 Frontend Code

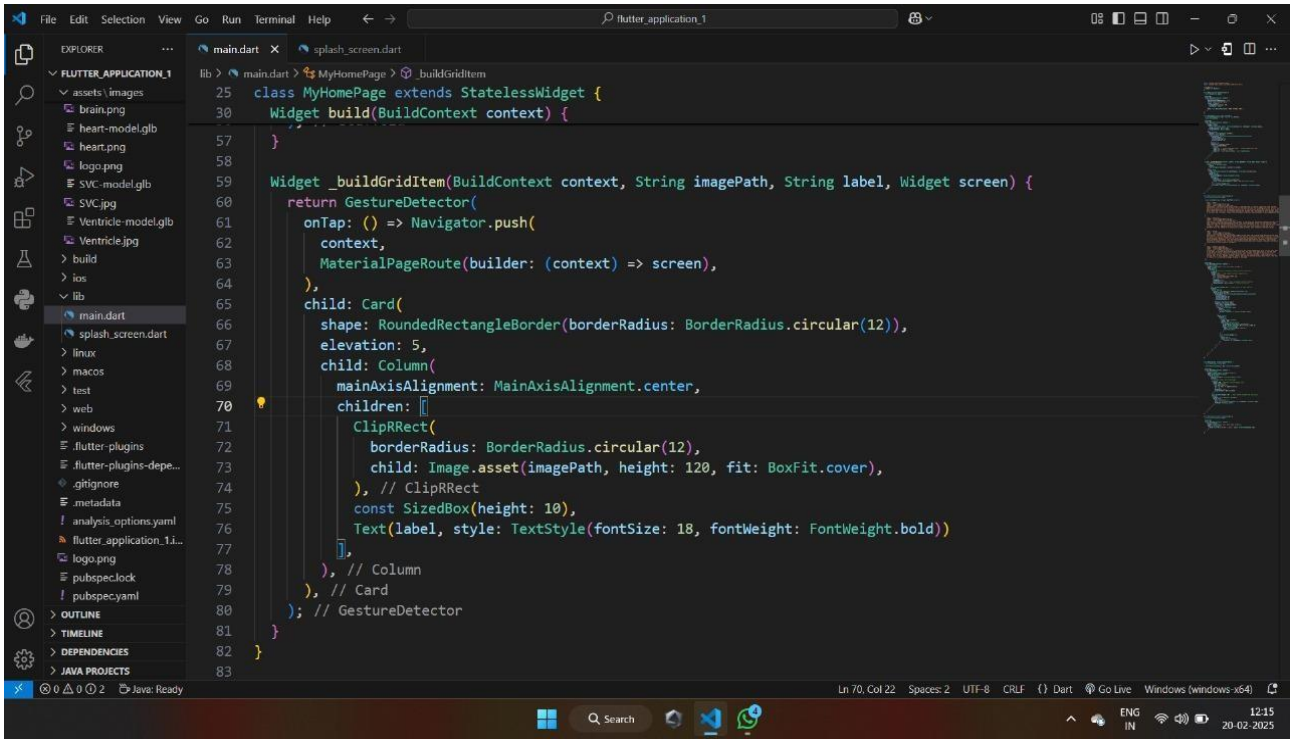

Fig 5.3 Backend Code

5.2 OUTPUT

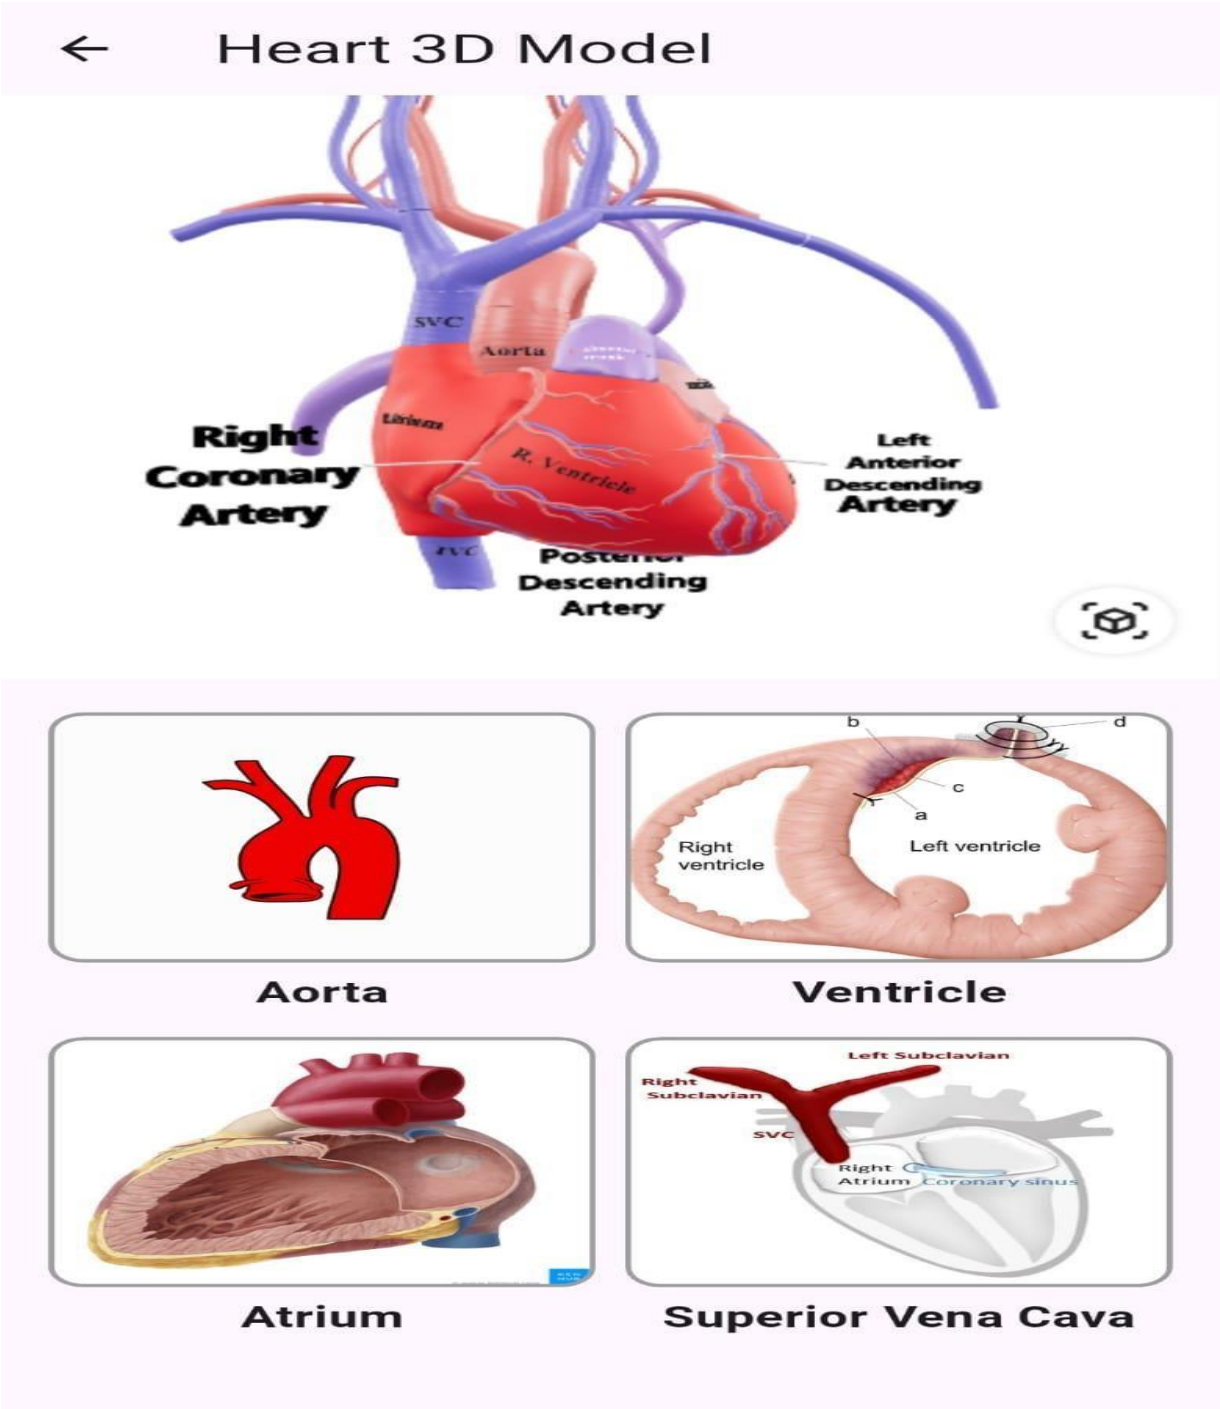

Fig 5.4 Selection of Parts

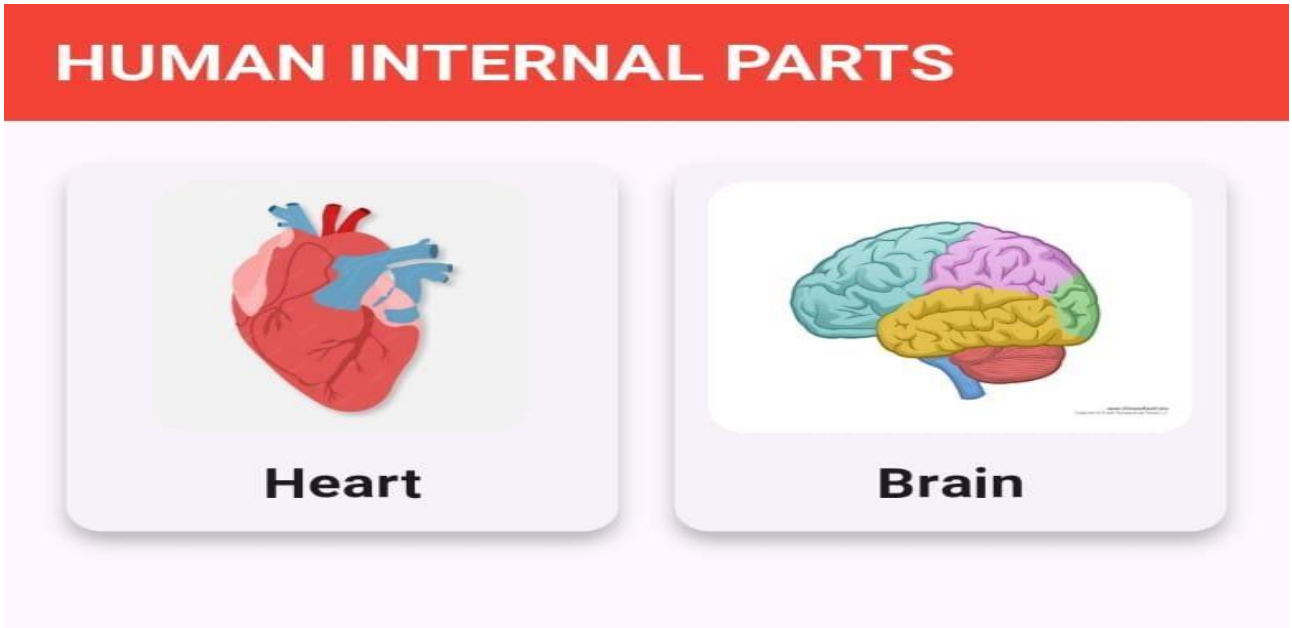

Fig 5.5 Application Dashboard

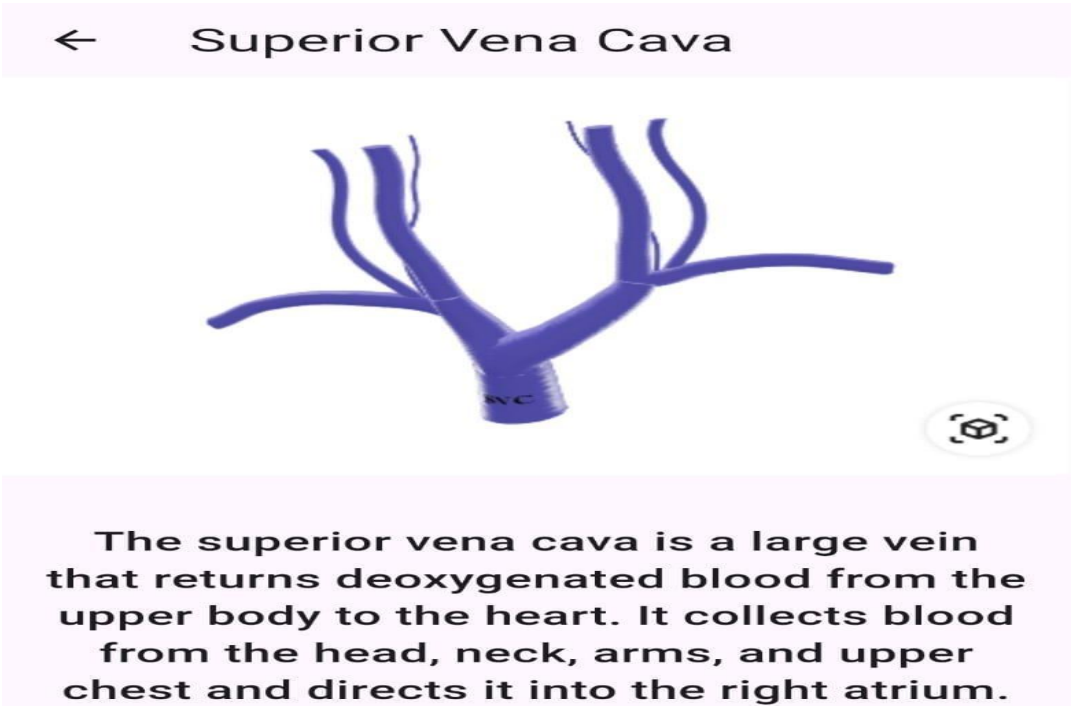

Fig 5.6 Information of the Parts

6. CONCLUSION

In conclusion, the development of an Augmented Reality (AR) application focused on human internal organs represents a significant advancement in educational technology, offering a dynamic and immersive learning experience. By leveraging interactive 3D models, real-time engagement, and comprehensive educational content, this application not only enhances students' understanding of anatomy but also fosters curiosity and deeper exploration of the human body. The integration of user-friendly interfaces, robust analytics, and continuous content updates ensures that the application remains relevant and effective in meeting the diverse needs of learners. As educational institutions increasingly embrace innovative teaching methods, this AR solution stands out as a valuable tool that can transform traditional learning approaches, making the study of human anatomy more accessible, engaging, and impactful for students across various educational levels.

In conclusion, the creation of an Augmented Reality (AR) application centered around human internal organs is a transformative step in educational practices, offering a multifaceted and immersive approach to learning anatomy. This innovative application utilizes cutting-edge technology to provide students with interactive 3D models that allow them to visualize and manipulate anatomical structures in a way that traditional textbooks simply cannot achieve. By bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical application, the AR experience enhances comprehension, retention, and engagement among learners, making complex biological concepts more accessible and understandable.

The educational benefits of this AR application extend beyond mere visualization; it encourages active participation and exploration. Students can interact with the organ models, zoom in for a closer look, and receive real-time information about each organ's structure and function, fostering a deeper understanding of human biology. This hands-on approach not only captivates students’ interest but also cultivates critical thinking and problem-solving skills as they navigate through the interactive content. Furthermore, the incorporation of quizzes and assessments provides immediate feedback, allowing learners to gauge their understanding and progress, which is essential for effective learning.

7. FUTURE SCOPE

The future scope of AR-based human internal organs for education is highly promising and is set to transform medical and anatomy learning in several impactful ways. One key area of advancement lies in the enhancement of 3D visualization, where AR will offer increasingly detailed, high-resolution models of organs, including microscopic structures, enabling students to explore anatomy at both macro and micro levels. Additionally, the integration of haptic feedback will allow for tactile interaction, providing an experience closer to real dissections and surgeries.

With the incorporation of AI and machine learning, AR-based education can become more personalized and adaptive, offering tailored content based on a student's progress, while also providing real-time assessments to enhance learning outcomes. Moreover, AR technology will enable remote and collaborative learning, where students from different locations can interact with the same 3D models, fostering teamwork and shared learning experiences. AR could also be a game-changer in surgical training, offering realistic simulations for students to practice complex procedures on virtual organs without any risks, and even aiding real surgeries by providing real-time data overlays.

As AR hardware becomes more affordable and portable, this technology is expected to become accessible to a broader audience, including institutions with limited resources. The future may also see the integration of AR with VR and mixed reality, creating immersive learning environments where students can switch between augmented and virtual contexts for a comprehensive educational experience. Continuous updates through cloud-based content libraries will ensure that students learn from the latest medical research and have access to a wide variety of organ models.

8. REFERENCES

[1] Chen, Y., "Augmented Reality in Medical Education: A Case Study of Human Internal Organs", Springer, Volume 45, June 2020.

[2] Wang, J., "AR-based Visualization of Human Organs for Interactive Learning", IEEE Xplore, Volume 82, September 2019.

[3] Patel, K., "Augmented Reality for Human Anatomy Education: An Immersive Approach", Elsevier, Volume 12, February 2021.

[4] Singh, R. and Verma, P., "Enhancing Medical Training through AR-based Human Organ Models", ACM Transactions, Volume 99, December 2022.

[5] Gupta, S., "Educational Use of Augmented Reality for Visualizing Internal Human Anatomy", IEEE Transactions, Volume 37, March 2020.

[6] Park, J., "A Study of AR Applications for Medical Students to Learn Human Organs", Taylor & Francis, Volume 64, July 2021.

[7] Sharma, P., "Interactive Learning of Human Anatomy with Augmented Reality", Elsevier, Volume 71, October 2020.

[8] Liu, Q., "Augmented Reality and its Application in Teaching Human Internal Organs", Wiley, Volume 24, May 2021.

[9] Rodrigues, M., "AR-Enabled Human Anatomy Education: Bridging the Gap between Theory and Practice", Springer, Volume 84, November 2022.

[10] Jones, A., "Augmented Reality in Medical Training: A Focus on Human Internal Organs", IEEE Access, Volume 53, August 2021.

[11] Ponce, R., Montoya, S., “AR-based Learning: Visualizing Human Organs in Medical Education,” Springer, Volume 15, July 2019.

[12] Bane, M., Khalid, A., “Augmented Reality for Medical Training: Human Internal Organs Visualization,” IEEE Access, Volume 7, August 2020.

[13] Nunes, P., Silva, R., “Augmented Reality Systems for Human Anatomy Learning,” Wiley, Volume 18, January 2020.

[14] Li, H., Zhang, W., “AR Applications for Visualizing Internal Human Organs in Medical Education,” Taylor & Francis, Volume 24, June 2022.

9. PUBLICATIONS BY THE CANDIDATE

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Prof Aarti Abhyankar, Mayank Thakur, Aryan Vaity, Shubham Vichare, Suyash Vichare have published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link
https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Prof Aarti Abhyankar has published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link
https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Mayank Thakur has published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link
https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Aryan Vaity has published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link
https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Shubham Vichare has published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link
https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

IJSRST

International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology

Print ISSN : 2395-6011 | Online ISSN : 2395-602X

[UGC Journal No : 64011]

Peer Reviewed and Refereed International Scientific Research Journal

Scientific Journal Impact Factor : 8.62

Certificate of Publication

Ref : Certificate/Volume 12/Issue 2/IJSRST251222647 20-Apr-2025

This is to certify that Suyash Vichare has published a research paper entitled 'AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education' in the International Journal of Scientific Research in Science and Technology (IJSRST), Volume 12, Issue 2, March-April 2025.

This Paper can be downloaded from the following IJSRST website link

https://ijsrst.com/index.php/home/article/view/IJSRST251222647

DOI : https://doi.org/10.32628/IJSRST251222647

IJSRST Team wishes all the best for bright future

Editor in Chief
IJSRST

Associate Editor
IJSRST

Website : https://ijsrst.com

10. EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL PROJECT COMPETITION CERTIFICATES

Excelssior Education Society's
K.C.College Of Engineering & Management
Studies & Research,Thane(E)

INSTITUTION'S INNOVATION COUNCIL

XZIBIT 2025

CERTIFICATE FOR PARTICIPATION

THIS CERTIFICATE IS PRESENTED TO

Shubham Vichare

from K C College Of Engineering And Management Studies And Research. Thane(E)

Project name AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education

for participating in XZIBIT 2025 held on 29th March & 1st April.

Prof. Amarja Adgaonkar
(IQAC COORDINATOR)

Dr. Vilas Nitnaware
(PRINCIPAL)

Excelssior Education Society's
K.C.College Of Engineering & Management
Studies & Research,Thane(E)

INSTITUTION'S INNOVATION COUNCIL

XZIBIT 2025

CERTIFICATE FOR PARTICIPATION

THIS CERTIFICATE IS PRESENTED TO

Suyash Vichare

from K C College Of Engineering And Management Studies And Research. Thane(E)

Project name AR Based Human Internal Organs for Education

for participating in XZIBIT 2025 held on 29th March & 1st April.

Prof. Amarja Adgaonkar
(IQAC COORDINATOR)

Dr. Vilas Nitnaware
(PRINCIPAL)

SARASWATI Education Society's

SARASWATI College of Engineering

Learn Live Achieve and Contribute

Kharghar, Navi Mumbai 410210

NAAC A+ Accredited

CERTIFICATE

OF PARTICIPATION

This Certificate is presented to

Mayank Thakur

for participating in the "SCOE AVISHKAR - 2025"
Project Competition held on 4th April, 2025.

Dr. Saumya Singh
Convener, SCOE AVISHKAR

Dr. Manjusha Deshmukh
Principal, SCOE

SARASWATI Education Society's

SARASWATI College of Engineering

Learn Live Achieve and Contribute

Kharghar, Navi Mumbai 410210

NAAC A+ Accredited

CERTIFICATE

OF PARTICIPATION

This Certificate is presented to

Aryan Vairy

for participating in the "SCOE AVISHKAR - 2025"
Project Competition held on 4th April, 2025.

Dr. Saumya Singh
Convener, SCOE AVISHKAR

Dr. Manjusha Deshmukh
Principal, SCOE

SARASWATI Education Society's

SARASWATI College of Engineering

Learn Live Achieve and Contribute

Kharghar, Navi Mumbai 410210

NAAC A+ Accredited

CERTIFICATE

OF PARTICIPATION

This Certificate is presented to

Shubham Michare

for participating in the "SCOE AVISHKAR - 2025"
Project Competition held on 4th April, 2025.

Dr. Saumya Singh
Convener, SCOE AVISHKAR

Dr. Manjusha Deshmukh
Principal, SCOE

SARASWATI Education Society's

SARASWATI College of Engineering

Learn Live Achieve and Contribute

Kharghar, Navi Mumbai 410210

NAAC A+ Accredited

CERTIFICATE

OF PARTICIPATION

This Certificate is presented to

Suyash Michare

for participating in the "SCOE AVISHKAR - 2025"
Project Competition held on 4th April, 2025.

Dr. Saumya Singh
Convener, SCOE AVISHKAR

Dr. Manjusha Deshmukh
Principal, SCOE